Kumari Living Goddess Nepal Arnaud Demaury, 2018-09-07 Although in some traditions goddesses exist only in the spiritual realm, in Nepal they live and breathe. These Kumari, where living goddesses, are regarded as the terrestrial manifestations of divine feminine energy. Selected as children, they live in temples, are transported in floats during the holidays and are venerated by thousands of Hindus and Buddhists. This girl must be from the caste Newar, that is to say, a founding ethnic group of the Kathmandu valley. These girls are in competition and they have to make sure of certain physical characteristics. If the criteria are fulfilled, the girls are then presented to a group of priests who study the horoscope of their birth ... and finally be elected.

Living Our Religions Anjana Narayan, Bandana Purkayastha, 2009 The population of the South Asian Diaspora in the US is over 2.5 million people. Yet in a post 9/11 climate of opinion, little is known about this group beyond images of Muslim and Hindu fundamentalists and terrorists. This is particularly true of women where simplistic assumptions about veils and subordination obscure the voices of the women themselves. Rarely are Hindu and Muslim American women—many of whom are social workers, physicians, lawyers, academics, students, homemakers—asked about their everyday lives and religious beliefs. Living our Religions brings out these hidden stories from South Asian American women of Bangladeshi, Pakistani, Indian and Nepali origin. Their accounts show how diverse and culturally dynamic religious practices emerge within the intersection of histories and politics of specific locales. The authors describe the race, gender, and ethnic boundaries they encounter; they also document how they resist and challenge these boundaries. Living our Religions cuts through the myths and ethnocentrism of popular portrayals to reveal the vibrancy, courage and agency of an invisible minority.
