Time Delay and Its Effect in a Virtual Lab Created Using Cloud Computing Juan Nunez,2010 The emergence of Cloud Computing, as a model of virtualized physical resources and virtualized infrastructure, offers the opportunity of outsourcing the implementation of a Virtual Lab Manager. Virtual Lab Management has come to be considered the Holy Grail in the deployment and administration of Labs created in a Virtual Environment. With the advent of Cloud Computing new opportunities are developing that promise to cover much of the future in Virtual Labs. Designing network and information labs with real equipment and tools does not make sense from a cost benefit standpoint, as hardware gets obsolete in a short gap of time, therefore replacing real labs with labs in a Virtual environment this days is a must for teaching in information, security and network classes. Choosing an adequate Virtual Lab Environment solves the problem of creating an adequate academic environment where teachers can serve as effective guides for students which will have a lot of freedom and first hand on experience in the learning subject under consideration. A Virtual Lab Manager in a Cloud Computing environment reduces cost even further, but creates some doubts about the time delays inherent in such a technology. After choosing to use the one created by VMLogix for Amazonaws ec2, it was decided to answer a question in this paper: being Virtual Labs a real time application, how it is affected by time delays and bandwidth when accessed from remote places? The same criteria used for video on demand, voice-over-IP or on line business system as used in networks are going to be applied in the presented work although the much interactivity in a Virtual Lab of any kind.--Abstract.

Advances on remote laboratories and e-learning experiences Luís Gomes,Javier Garcia Zubia,2008 This book provides a comprehensive overview on several aspects of remote laboratories development and usage, and their potential impact in the teaching and learning processes using selected e-learning experiences.The book is based on the presentations and discussions carried out at «International Meeting on Professional Remote Laboratories», which took place in University of Deusto, Bilbao, in the period of November 16-17, 2006. Apart from chapters based on the presentations, some others have also been included in this book. In this way, we hope to give a broad, well balanced and up-to-date picture of the current status of remote labs and their role within the e-learning paradigm.

Design and Develop Second Life Virtual Lab for Biochemistry Blended Teaching and Learning Based on Constructivism Liang Ye,2017-01-27 This dissertation, Design and Develop Second Life Virtual Lab for Biochemistry Blended Teaching and Learning Based on Constructivism by Liang, Ye, 梁叶, was obtained from The University of Hong Kong (Pokfulam, Hong Kong) and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons: Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License. Abstract: Department of Biochemistry in HKU has been planning to implement virtual lab blended learning solution into their experiment related courses. Based on selected case, the study investigated whether the virtual lab would arouse more learning interests and improve the learning gains for students. Also, the study concluded some useful suggestions for virtual lab blended learning and generalized a few guidelines for instructional design on virtual lab. The study adopted mixed research methods with combination of quantitative and qualitative studies. With the ADDIE instructional design model, the researcher and his advisor constructed initial virtual lab in Second Life virtual design platform for selected class based on the teacher's suggestions and course arrangements. Then chosen students participated in demonstration classes organized in two groups, one with Second Life virtual lab for teaching and learning (SL Group) while the other without(Non-SL Group). The students were given same quiz in the Moodle LMS to compare their basic academic learning outcomes. Meanwhile, researcher with other three observers recorded students' class performances for each learning tasks by camera and observation forms. At the end of the class, surveys were delivered to them to collect their perceptions about learning with Second Life virtual lab and their suggestions for virtual lab design. The research findings indicate that students can basically accept the virtual lab blended learning solution. Compared with Non-SL Group, students from SL Group achieved higher average scores in academic quiz with more passions in class learning. They were more active in joining class activities and discussions in small team with more interactions between team members. However, they were also troubled by the use of virtual lab because of unclear instruction, technical problems, virtual learning activities design and virtual lab system issues. The paper argued the way of integrating the virtual lab into experiment courses in biochemistry teaching and learning. It discussed the proper ways to design the blended virtual lab learning system for learning purpose and questioned the virtual technologies used for learning design. Finally, it concluded some principles and guideline framework for blended virtual lab design and development in biochemistry teaching and learning, which can be also applied for similar design and development in health and medical education.
