Why Do We Quote? Ruth Finnegan, 2011-03-01 Quoting is all around us. But do we really know what it means? How do people actually quote today, and how did our present systems come about? This book brings together a down-to-earth account of contemporary quoting with an examination of the comparative and historical background that lies behind it and the characteristic way that quoting links past and present, the far and the near. Drawing from anthropology, cultural history, folklore, cultural studies, sociolinguistics, literary studies and the ethnography of speaking, Ruth Finnegan 's fascinating study sets our present conventions into crosscultural and historical perspective. She traces the curious history of quotation marks, examines the long tradition of quotation collections with their remarkable recycling across the centuries, and explores the uses of quotation in literary, visual and oral traditions. The book tracks the changing definitions and control of quoting over the millennia and in doing so throws new light on ideas such as imitation, allusion, authorship, originality and plagiarism

When Fears Frustrate Contentment Trevor N. Iskander, 2012-01-03 Self-help for conquering stress, anxiety, and fear.

Essential Self-Care for Caregivers and Helpers, Do you often daydream and muse on how wonderful it would be for someone to regularly be attending to YOUR needs? Do you spend a large part of each day helping others to feel better? This book may challenge your old patterns of thinking but following Brockman's Primary Directive to take care of yourself first, your life will start to transform and your health and well-being will begin to shift in a healing direction. Howard Brockman, LCSW has written his second book, this time emphasizing the importance of self-care for the legions of people supporting and taking care of others. While there are books that have been written about the challenges to professionals such as social workers, nurses and psychologists to becoming burned out, Brockman's book is written also for the millions of untrained non-professionals who are being recruited daily to care for their elderly parents. Do you fit into either of these categories? He describes the many influences that lead to compassion fatigue and becoming "infected" by the feelings of others. This is all about how unconscious empathy can take sensitive caregivers down a never-ending spiral to adrenal fatigue and depression. In Chapter 2, "Characteristics of High-Intensity Relaters," Brockman describes the primary personality of those helpers whose currency is relationship and who easily fall prey to subtle energetic influences that erode their vital force. Externally referencing to others' needs first tends to be one of their traits. Chapter 6, "Prevent Self-Sabotage," is filled with practical ways to stay focused and positive while overcoming old, repetitive and negative inner chatter. Confronting your tyrannizing inner critic is never easy—Brockman tells you how. He identifies different types of “energy drainers” that use our energy to enliven themselves and deplete ours. He does a good job explaining how to create secure and persistent energetic boundaries with difficult and demanding people and other disruptive environments. This is perhaps the most important theme woven throughout the book, for the helper personality tends to not know how to say NO to requests from others. Learning how to establish reliable energetic boundaries is incredibly important for protecting against the interpersonal hazard he refers to as psychotoxic contamination that can become cumulative over time and generate serious long-term health consequences. Dark and heavy energy can settle into and invade the body to wreak havoc with one’s health and emotional stability. The good news is that you can effectively create these boundaries and more importantly, learn how to sustain them amidst the ongoing demands of the people you are helping. He spends a chapter on how to use specific energy psychology techniques for emergency self-care, providing fascinating case examples to illustrate how to prevent post-traumatic stress from building up to become PTSD. Brockman spends some time explaining the importance of optimizing your self-care by managing your chi, and how plants, the natural world and flower essences can support helpers to maintain their inner balance and overall harmony. In Chapter 11, “Making It Happen From Within,” you will discover well-described and powerful imagery techniques for manifesting positive self-care outcomes for yourself. Brockman then teaches you how to connect to and work with your inner guides for reliable personal and professional guidance. The power of a caregiver’s presence is highlighted in the concluding chapter, discussing how “being the blessing” actually creates collective coherence in the immediate caregiver’s environment and thus positively affects those who are being cared for. For readers who would like to measure and determine the degree of their own present health and well-being, there are two self-assessment checklists for high-intensity relaters in Appendix 2 that can also be downloaded from his website, www.DynamicEnergeticHealing.com.

Quotes On Positive Thinking Andrew Durham,2020-07-24 Your self-worth is directly linked to your self-perception. What you say to yourself, how you treat yourself and how you feel about yourself, are all influenced by your self-perception. Thus, if you want to develop a healthy self-esteem and boost your self-confidence, the first place to start working on is your mind because your mind controls everything about you. What your mind dwells on, deliberate on or processes is dependent on what you feed it. If you feed your mind with negative information, that is what it would process and vice versa. But the output will be seen in how you feel about yourself, what you say to yourself often, your optimism and approach to life, the type of decisions you make and what you do. The question now is, how can you feed your mind with positive information? What do you read, hear or listen to often? One of the ways we feed our minds with positive information is through what we hear and read. When you read positive thinking books that stir your mind to focus on the positives in yourself and life, you are feeding your mind with positive information. We sometimes feel bad about ourselves because of the type of information that we have been feeding our minds about who we think we are. You have been feeding your mind with negative information about yourself that is why your mind is always making you feel unworthy and insecure. Now is the time to change what you feed your mind. Now is the time to discover your awesome qualities. Now is the time to feed your mind with the information of your awesomeness. And now is the time to build your self-esteem by changing what you feed your mind. This daily uplifting quotes book is a collection of uplifting sayings that will open the eyes of your mind to see and focus on the positive things going on in your life. As you feed your mind with the uplifting daily quotes in this book and ponder on them, your mind will start undergoing positive transformation and you would start observing positive tangible changes in how you feel about yourself, what you think about yourself, what you say to yourself and your approach to life. You will also observe a great boost in your self-esteem, self-confidence and optimism. Grab a copy of this great quotes book and transform your life with the uplifting daily words of wisdom in its pages.
