Heart of Darkness Joseph Conrad, 2011-03-01 This volume presents the text of the 1921 Heinemann edition of Conrad's classic short novel along with documents that place the work in historical context and critical essays that read Heart of Darkness from several contemporary critical perspectives. The text and essays are complemented by biographical and critical introductions, bibliographies, and a glossary of critical and theoretical terms. In this third edition, the section of cultural documents and illustrations is entirely new, as are two recent exemplary critical essays by Gabrielle McIntire and Tony C. Brown that synthesize a variety of current critical approaches.

The Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Debate in Germany Concerning EUFOR RD Congo Mission Stefan Plenk,2007-08 Seminar paper from the year 2007 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Region: Africa, grade: 1,7, University of Bologna, course: Political Development in Least developed Countries, 57 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: The transformation process in the Democratic Republic of the Congo is one of the most crucial political changes during the last few years. Creating a stable and strong democratic system within the biggest African countries could bring light and development in the former heart of darkness which could also be extended to other African states. The following paper tries to describe the sad story of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, concentrating on the Mobutu dictatorship and the transition and state building process afterwards. Furthermore, it is about the EUFOR RD Congo military mission that should support the transformation process, protecting the presidential elections in 2006. What about the leading nation Germany? Was it difficult to legislate the mission, for a state with such a heavy historical burden? What about meanings and opinions in German parliament, the federal army and of course the German people? After the history of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the text is focussed on the elections in 2006, the EU mission and the debate in Germany concerning military aid for this big African country. In the end the paper shows details and developments of EUFOR RD Congo mission, whereby it also tries to analyze whether the mission was a success or failure. The conclusion tries to answer the success or failure thesis as well as it ought to offer an image of the transformation process in the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the future. This seminar paper is very interesting for students of political science, history and of course for everyone who likes to get to know more background about this actual and highly discussed mission.

Wartime Rape. Sexual Terrorism in the Eastern Provinces of the Democratic Republic of Congo Stefan Kirchner, 2008-11-17 Document from the year 2008 in the subject Law - European and International Law, Intellectual Properties, Université Paris-Sorbonne (Paris IV), language: English, abstract: About 5.4 million people have been killed in the wars in the Democratic Republic of Congo (D.R.C.), the former Zaire. 45,000 die every month and hundreds of thousands of women have been raped here in recent years. Wartime rapes are anything but new and have been employed not only to terrorize the population but also as weapon of genocide in Rwanda, Bosnia and Darfur. The Eastern Congolese provinces of North and South Kivu have been affected by particularly gruesome acts of violence and thousands of victims suffer from rape-induced fistulae, ruptures of the walls which separate the victim's vagina from her rectum. According to UN staff and doctors in the region, all armed groups in the region are involved in rapes and despite the 2002 Pretoria Accord which put an official end to the war, attacks and rapes continue to this very day. Many survivors are forced out of their homes and their families abandoned and left to fend for themselves. Therefore, apart from medical treatment and psychological counseling, there is a strong demand for justice. But due to the weak position of women in Congolese society, justice is much harder to get by than medical treatment. Although the Congolese Penal Code and Military Penal Code penalize these crimes, the reaction by the Congolese government to the atrocities remains insufficient, making a solution based on Congolese criminal law unlikely. The practical application of the D.R.C.'s domestic laws is found wanting and the law does not have the deterrent effect which is required to prevent future atrocities, also due to the traditional position of women in Congolese society continues to be reflected in the law: According to Art. 448 of the D.R.C.'s family code, a married woman has to obtain her husband's permission to bring a case to court – which provides a major obstacle on the road to justice. This book deals with the multidimensional aspects of the problem, which range from medicine and psychology to social issues and the quest for justice. In the latter part we will examine not only the background by looking at relevant rules of International Human Rights Law and International Humanitarian Law but also look at legal responses to these crimes both on a national level in the D.R.C. as well as on an international level and with the question of how justice can be achieved for rape victims in a country ravaged by war in which women continue to be second class citizens.
