Should the "Doctrine of Consideration" be abolished? Ciaran Gallagher, 2016-04-04 Essay from the year 2016 in the subject Law - Civil / Private, Trade, Anti Trust Law, Business Law, National University of Ireland, Galway, course: Corporate Law, language: English, abstract: This essay is asking the question whether the doctrine of consideration ought to be abolished. It will argue that all that should be required for a legally binding promise is a clear intention to be bound by the terms of a promise and, perhaps, detrimental reliance on that promise by the other party. The Doctrine of Consideration is one of the three essential parts which make up a valid contract, the other two being that of offer and acceptance. In a contract, if consideration is not part of the contract then it will determine whether it is enforceable or not unless it's incorporated into a deed under a seal. This particular requirement in terms of contract law has been put under much scrutiny recently and there have been calls for the abolition of the doctrine. In this essay we will take a look at the functions of consideration, its purpose in modern law and the possible alternatives were it to be abolished. Consideration is prone to much criticism as it is said to have a very narrow scope as a definition with many suggesting that the narrowness the doctrine shows is now more about denying legal effect in most promises. The thinking behind this criticism is that many courts bring consideration into cases without a second thought and use it as a tool to guide their judgements. This then leads to it being open to many more avenues such as the Williams v Roffey case where they suggested that practical benefit counted as sufficient consideration. This then leads to unlawful claims as never before had consideration been brought into a pre-existing contract case.

The Law of Contract Roger Brownsword, 2003 The second edition of this successful work brings the coverage up-to-date with all key developments and relevant changes since 1998. It provides a comprehensive and authoritative treatment of all aspects of the law of contract. It differs to other texts on the topic by offering a fresh, new approach. Analysing the current law, it also highlights possible future developments. Accessible and authoritative, it is designed specifically to meet the needs of the modern practitioner.

Cases and Materials on the Law of Restitution Andrew S. Burrows, Ewan McKendrick, 1997 This is the first cases and materials book to be published on one of the most topical areas of the common law---the law of restitution. It contains extracts from the leading cases, predominantly from the UK and the Commonwealth, together with some US cases. There are also extracts from the writings of some of the world's leading academic authorities on restitution law. These materials are supported by comments and notes written by the editors and there are also questions and notes on further reading. Clearly, the components of this book form a thorough exploration of the law of restitution and as such will be essential reading for all students of the law in this area.

Cases and Materials on Contracts Robert W. Hamilton, Alan Scott Rau, Russell J. Weintraub, 1992 Introduces students to the study of the common-law legal system and the application of legal principles to complex transactions. In addition, it exposes students to statutory analysis. A feature of this book is that Uniform Commercial Code principles are integrated with common-law rules throughout the book. Material also exposes students to the methods and theories of Code interpretation.
