Mental Health Nursing Gylo (Julie) Hercelinskyj, Louise Alexander, 2019-07-30 Mental Health Nursing: Applying Theory to Practice is a new Australian text combining a theoretical approach to mental health nursing with clinical reasoning and a practical framework for real-life nursing situations. Ideal for both clinical and theory mental health course units, the text was developed with input from consumers and clinicians, and includes the clinical manifestations, impacts, treatment and management of persons suffering from mental illness. Chapters on suicide and self-harm, and Mental Health First Aid provide detailed coverage of these contemporary mental health issues, while a chapter on mental state examination (MSE) comprehensively explores MSE in a style similar to a traditional psychiatry text and in the context of many different mental health conditions, giving students multiple perspectives of presentations. Critical thinking and review questions challenge students to apply theory to practice, and pharmacology is discussed in each disorder-chapter, helping students to contextualise their learning. With coverage of the Mental Health Act (2014), and criteria from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Fifth Edition (DSM-5) integrated throughout, the text equips students with a working understanding of major mental health disorders, and the ability to work practically when engaging with persons suffering from mental illness. New, print versions of this book come with bonus online study tools on the CourseMate Express and Search Me! Nursing platforms.

Chapters on 'Suicide and non-suicidal self-injury' and 'Mental health first aid' provide detailed coverage of these contemporary mental health issues, while a chapter on Mental State Examination (MSE) comprehensively explores MSE in a style similar to a traditional psychiatry text and in the context of many different mental health conditions, giving students multiple perspectives of presentations. Critical thinking and review questions challenge students to apply theory to practice, and pharmacology is discussed in each disorder-chapter, helping students to contextualise their learning. With coverage of the Mental Health Act (2014), and criteria from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Fifth Edition (DSM-5) integrated throughout, the text equips students with a working understanding of major mental health disorders, and the ability to work practically when engaging with persons suffering from mental illness. This enhanced edition now also includes discussion around mental health as it pertains to the effects that COVID-19 and the global pandemic have had on consumers and practitioners. Resources for the instructor include updated Instructor's Manual, PowerPoints and Test Bank.

Complementary Therapies in Nursing and Midwifery Pauline McCabe, 2001 The therapies described in this book include nutrition, aromatherapy, relaxation techniques, music therapy, pet therapy, therapeutic touch and massage. They can be used in nursing practice to induce relaxation, help create a healing environment, increase comfort, reduce pain and address troublesome symptoms, but they also have a role in empowering both nurses and patients to maintain their own health.-- Cover.

Part 2 unpacks key issues across a range of clinical contexts that will be a key resource for clinical practicums. Contexts covered include acute care, community nursing, paediatric nursing, mental health nursing and aged care. Part 3 examines the professional and practice issues of nursing in diverse, distinctive and emergent practice areas including aesthetic nursing, military nursing and international nursing with case studies and vignettes highlighting common issues and challenges. Drawing on the expertise of a wide range of Australian clinical and academic nursing professionals, this text is a key reference for all nursing undergraduates seeking to enter successfully into the profession.

Bachelor of Midwifery (BM) Students' Experiences of Reflective Practice Catherine Lara Wright, 2014 This study was initiated to explore if and how BM students understand and participate in reflection, along with factors that may act as barriers to and enablers of this process. The aim of this grounded theory study was to explore 2nd year ACU Bachelor of Midwifery (Melbourne) students' experience of reflective practice. Eight students agreed to participate in semi-structured interviews; analysis of the data identified that the students' first impressions of reflective practice and subsequent ongoing support to participate in reflective activities had a significant impact on when and how they undertook reflective practice. The study identified the core category of becoming a reflective midwife, which incorporated the major categories of 'learning', 'practising', 'valuing' and 'adapting'. Overall, the study concluded that contrary to anecdotal reports that reflective practice was a tiresome chore or a burden; all midwifery student participants appreciated the value of reflective practice, undertook reflective practice activities in one way or another, and voiced their intentions to continue to become reflective practitioners. This insight prompts consideration of how reflective practice is taught at university and the timing of its introduction and ongoing inclusion throughout the course. Additionally, strategies to promote and facilitate ongoing reflective practice activities within the general population of midwifery students could be reviewed and implemented. (Abstract)
