

Lazarus And Folkman Model Of Stress

Kelli A. Keough,Julio Garcia

Stress, Appraisal, and Coping Richard S. Lazarus,Susan Folkman,1984-03-15 The reissue of a classic work, now with a foreword by Daniel Goleman! Here is a monumental work that continues in the tradition pioneered by co-author Richard Lazarus in his classic book Psychological Stress and the Coping Process. Dr. Lazarus and his collaborator, Dr. Susan Folkman, present here a detailed theory of psychological stress, building on the concepts of cognitive appraisal and coping which have become major themes of theory and investigation. As an integrative theoretical analysis, this volume pulls together two decades of research and thought on issues in behavioral medicine, emotion, stress management, treatment, and life span development. A selective review of the most pertinent literature is included in each chapter. The total reference listing for the book extends to 60 pages. This work is necessarily multidisciplinary, reflecting the many dimensions of stress-related problems and their situation within a complex social context. While the emphasis is on psychological aspects of stress, the book is oriented towards professionals in various disciplines, as well as advanced students and educated laypersons. The intended audience ranges from psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, nurses, and social workers to sociologists, anthropologists, medical researchers, and physiologists.

Innovative research programs and methods are presented throughout. The concluding section showcases emerging issues and new directions in the field. New to This Edition Foundations of Health Psychology Howard S. Friedman,Roxane Cohen Silver,2006-08-31 Health psychology is the scientific study of psychological processes related to health and health care. Although the field is only 25 years old, it has burgeoned into a major scientific and clinical discipline. Health psychology has excellent scientific journals, thousands of scientists and practitioners, and many students. Yet, there has not been a sufficient statement or explication of the foundational concepts upon which this flourishing field is built. Foundations of Health Psychology brings together top experts to provide a much-needed conceptual base for this rapidly expanding field. Rather than take a medical model approach, the volume examines health psychology from a theoretical, conceptual, and psychological perspective. After presenting an overview of the field's history and methods, the contributors address core concepts of the biopsychosocial approach to health and then discuss applications to health promotion and illness prevention and treatment. Providing a deep understanding of the intellectual foundations of health psychology, this volume will be invaluable for both new and experienced researchers, as well as students and other scholars seeking a firm basis for successful research and practice.

The Oxford Handbook of Health Psychology Howard S. Friedman,2014-02 The Oxford Handbook of Health Psychology brings together preeminent experts to provide a comprehensive view of key concepts, tools, and findings of this rapidly expanding core discipline.

Memory for Everyday and Emotional Events Nancy L. Stein,Charles J. Brainerd,Barbara Tversky,Peter A. Ornstein,2018-10-24 The nature of memory for everyday events, and the contexts that can affect it, are controversial topics being investigated by researchers in cognitive, social, clinical, and developmental/lifespan psychology today. This book brings many of these researchers together in an attempt to unpack the contextual and processing variables that play a part in everyday memory, particularly for emotion-laden events. They discuss the mental structures and processes that operate in the formation of memory representations and their later retrieval and interpretation.

Core Concepts in Advanced Practice Nursing Denise L. Robinson,Cheryl Pope Kish,2001 Developed specifically for masters level nursing courses, this information-packed text addresses nearly all core content subjects of the graduate curriculum. It contains information on health care policy, organization of the health care delivery system, health care financing, ethics, professional role development, theoretical foundations of nursing practice, human diversity and social issues, and health promotion and disease prevention. Written by experts, each chapter includes an overview of the topic, definitions of relevant terms, review and history of the literature, critical issues, priorities for research, future directions, implications for advanced practice nursing, critical thinking activities, and suggestions for further learning.

Stress and Emotion Richard S. Lazarus,2006-05-04 This volume is a sequel to the landmark work that established an exciting new field of study, Stress, Appraisal and Coping (Lazarus and Folkman, 1984). The author now explores the newest trends in research and theory, focusing on the rationale for a cognitive-mediational approach to stress and emotions. He makes clear distinctions between social stress, physiological stress, and psychological stress. By integrating both stress and emotion into one theoretical framework, with appraisal and coping as its basis, this book takes a narrative approach to both theory and research. Lazarus concludes with a look at stress and health, with a specific focus on new developments in infectious diseases, the role of the nervous system, and his view of recent changes in psychotherapy. Handbook of Personality, Third Edition Oliver P. John, Richard W. Robins, Lawrence A. Pervin, 2008-08-05 This authoritative handbook is the reference of choice for researchers and students of personality. Leading authorities describe the most important theoretical approaches in personality and review the state of the science in five broad content areas: biological bases; development; self and social processes; cognitive and motivational processes; and emotion, adjustment, and health. Within each area, chapters present innovative ideas, findings, research designs, and measurement approaches. Areas of integration and consensus are discussed, as are key questions and controversies still facing the field.

Does Coping Predict Clinical Outcome in Chronic Low Back Pain? Anne L. Weickgenant, 1993 This project was undertaken to investigate the relationship between patients' coping responses and clinical outcome for chronic low back pain (CLBP). Three separate studies were conducted with clinical back pain patient samples to evaluate the hypotheses that passive-avoidant coping (a) would be endorsed more often in response to back pain stressors than in response to general life stressors, and (b) would be associated with poorer clinical outcomes. Multidimensional clinical outcome groups were defined by cluster analytic procedures that were previously validated for CLBP. Coping was evaluated in response to both a standardized back pain stressor and a general life stressor of the subjects' choosing. Study I investigated the hypotheses in a cross-sectional analysis of 63 male CLBP patients. Study II evaluated the hypotheses in a prospective placebo controlled experimental analysis of the effectiveness of Nortriptyline for CLBP. This study investigated the relationship between coping and medication response in 43 male CLBP patients. Study III examined the hypotheses in a prospective longitudinal evaluation of 32 male patients. These patients were followed from early (6-10 weeks) after onset of their first back pain episode until six months after onset (the duration criterion for chronic pain) in order to evaluate the relationship between coping at onset and the development of chronic pain. Data analyses emphasized multivariate analysis of variance and discriminant function analysis. In general, the results across studies supported the a priori hypotheses. Several specific coping strategies differentiated the empirically defined clinical outcome groups. Conclusions: (a) coping is associated with clinical outcome in CLBP, (b) passive-avoidant coping is more often endorsed in response to back pain stressors than general life stressors, and (c) passive-avoidant coping is associated with poorer clinical outcomes.
