Zombie Plague Geo Dell, 2014-04-11 Billy and Beth: March 11th Billy was up on the roof. Beth, Jamie, Winston and Scotty were standing at the edge of the building as he was, looking out over the city. Things were crazy, and they seemed to be getting worse as the days rolled by. The police precinct was still burning. It had started sometime during the night two days before, and since there was no one to put the fire out, it had been raging for hours now. A few minutes ago, the roof of the building next door to the precinct burst into flames. Maybe the fire had started inside, or the extreme heat from the burning police precinct had caused it to burst into flame, spontaneous combustion, but it was a strange thing to watch. It appeared as though it had simply burst into flames all on its own. The animated conversation about whether it had been spontaneous combustion or a fire source from inside the other building that had simply burned through, had kept up for a few moments, and then they had all lapsed back into silence. Beth spoke now. Where would we go? she asked. I think southeast, Scotty threw in. Why not north or northeast, Jamie asked. Makes no difference, I suppose, but this winter it might. That's why I think southeast. Billy said. Beth nodded. What's the radio say? It's bad everywhere. Different people, different days, all talking about the dead. Some talk about the living too, gangs, but the big deal is the dead. Every major city... Boston, Hartford, Manhattan, San Fran, Providence, Scranton, Miami... there are more. Every day you hear more places, and that's bad. But then there are the ones that you don't hear from anymore, and that's even worse, Billy said.

Plague World Dana Fredsti, 2014-08-26 The thrilling conclusion of the zombie apocalypse begun in PLAGUE TOWN and continued in PLAGUE NATION! The zombie plague has gone airborne, and the conspiracy that began it all reaches the boiling point. Having been ambushed in San Francisco, which is now fully engulfed in the zombie plague, Ashley and the wild cards must pursue the enemy to San Diego. There they will discover a splinter of their own organization, the Dolofónoi tou Zontanoús Nekroús, which seeks to weaponize the plague. But that isn't the worst news. The plague has gone airborne, making it transferable without physical contract. It cannot be controlled by anyone, so reports of the zombie swarm are coming in from across the United States - and across the world.

Zombie Plague Geo Dell, 2010-04-09 The one who was supposed to be on guard had dozed. The fire had burned low. He would probably chastise himself for it, except he would never have the opportunity to do that. He might have a split second in which to ask his God to forgive him, but he would probably waste that split second drowning in his fear, cursing, fighting, dying before he realized he had wasted his time. She was by his side a moment later. He slept on as she bent and prepared to take him. The boy and the twins had made their own choices. Her hands pinned his arms and her head darted quickly to his throat. The killing began... Candace's journal I haven't written in three days. So much has happened. A man attacked me, tried to rape me. I didn't even know him, and I don't know what motivated him. I don't understand it at all. Arlene shot and killed him. That was horrible as well. So many people were affected by it, not just me, and I can't see when it will ever really be over for any of us. Can anyone forget something like that? Not hardly, so I guess it will always be with me. But I didn't bury it. I have Patty, I have Mike, I have love to help me understand. Some women don't. Today Jessica died. She had been feeling down, ill, but she insisted she was fine. Maybe the shock of the way the world is now, what happened to me even, but we won't know exactly what happened or made it happen. Sandy said she arrested, her heart stopped. We buried her beside the highway, somewhere here in West Virginia. Not far behind us. Things we know: We have a place to go, we're going to get there. The days are still about 26 hours long. Maybe that is the new day. The destruction is widespread and really bad. We ran into a lake the other day where there was not supposed to be one. We could easily tell that as the road ran right into the water. There's a lot of skip on the C.B. That tells us there are other people scattered around the world, at least the United States. So we're not alone at all. Were just scattered. Lilly is a big one for prayer. I'm not usually, but the last few days I've been praying God will get us through all of this.

Zombie Plague Geo Dell, 2017-04-11 Dead contains the first four books of the Zombie Plague series... He came awake in the darkness, but awake wasn't precisely the term. Alive was precisely the term. He knew alive was precisely the term, because he could remember dying. He remembered that his heart had stopped in his chest. He had remembered wishing that it would start again. That bright moment or two of panic, and then he remembered beginning not to care. It didn't matter. Nothing mattered. And he had drifted away. Now he had drifted back. But drifted was not exactly right. He had slammed back into himself where he lay on the cold subbasement floor where he had been murdered by a roving gang of thieves. And he knew those things were true because he remembered them. And he knew they were true because he was dead. He was still dead. His heart was not beating in his chest. His blood was cold and jelled in his veins. He could feel it. Some kind of new perception. He lay and watched the shadows deepen in the corners of the basement ceiling for a short time longer, and then he tried to move. His body did not want to move at first. It felt as though it weighed a ton, two tons, but with a little more effort it came away. He sat and then crawled to his knees... The first four books of Zombie Plague in one volume...

Zombie Plague Geo Dell, 2012-03-28 The city had fallen quiet. That night the recently risen from the dead were dead once more. They had fallen, sprawled into the streets where they had stood after crawling from their hiding places. Dead again. They had thought it was over. Hoped it was over. Donita stood now and looked at the city. They weren't dead any longer. Whatever it had been, it had not been able to kill them, if that had been what it was supposed to do. In fact, it had seemed to make them even stronger once they had come back the second time; stronger and smarter. She could see them in the streets below now. They walked purposefully from doorway to doorway, testing the locks, stopping at every shadow. Investigating. A car here, a doorway there, looking up to catch her eyes. Maybe just to let her know that they knew she was still there. And Bear slept behind her in the bed, unaware of it all. Oblivious to it. And there was irony here. Irony, because she was dying. She was dying, and she was sure that they knew it. She was sure that was the reason they kept looking up at her where she stood on the balcony, judging the time between now and when she would be one of them. She blinked away tears as she looked out over the night darkened city: the fires that burned, the dead that prowled the streets.

Zombie Plague Geo Dell, 2011-04-15 It's worse than just that, Bear said. They're everywhere. I mean you hear about those larger places, but everywhere you go they're there... Die? You come back on their side of it. Head shots, Billy said. He had wandered over from under the hood of one of the trucks. He wiped his hands on a rag as he talked. That's all that will kill them. You don't want to make a mistake with that, or wait, or anything like that. Head shot. He nodded. You can't go anywhere in this country where they aren't, Bear said. Mike nodded. Well, that doesn't change our position... We still have to come out for supplies... The larger we get the more often we'll have to come out too. Then they'll kill you eventually. Or other factions will, because that's the other problem. It isn't just the Dead you have to contend with. You think I have a hard edge to me? A little cynical even. Well you're right. I do. But I'm alive. I'm alive out here in the world too, not back there in the woods hiding out somewhere. Bear said. Uh huh, Mike said. So you're just gonna stay out here until they hunt you down and kill you? And you consider that smart? Bear laughed. A heavy rumble in his wide chest. Is that an invitation? Mike shrugged. It could be.
