HCR-20 violence risk assessment scheme overview and annotated bibliography, 2006 The risk assessment program and the Court of Penal Execution in the province of Buenos Aires, Argentina. [...] The term receiver operating characteristic took its name because it describes the detection, or prediction, characteristics of the test, and the receiver of the data can operate at any given point on the curve (Metz, 1978). [...] The area under the curve (AUC) of the ROC graph can be taken as an index for interpreting the overall accuracy of the predictor. [...] These authors used a pseudo-prospective design to evaluate the utility of three decision support tools for assessing tools as well as the need for tools that are more appropriate for acute risk of violence: the HCR-20, the PCL-SV, and the for short-term risk assessment as opposed to long-term risk McNiel-Binder Violence Screening Checklist (VSC) [...] Logistic regression analyses showed that when violence was predicted based on the total scores from the PCL-SV, the HCR-20 and the VSC, that only the VSC made an independent contribution to the violence prediction.

Using the HCR-20 V3 for Structured Professional Judgement. Risk Assessment and Management in Vignette 1 Kornelia Scott, 2025-02-21 Essay from the year 2024 in the subject Psychology - Forensic Psychology and Penal System, , language: English, abstract: This assignment applies the HCR-20 V3 Structured Professional Judgement (SPJ) tool to assess and manage future risk in Vignette 1. The HCR-20 V3 is selected due to its comprehensive approach to violence risk assessment, integrating historical, clinical, and risk management factors. The selection and application of this tool are critically appraised with reference to the relevant literature, focusing on its validity, reliability, and utility in professional settings. Key findings and recommendations are provided regarding the level of risk, treatment needs, and risk management strategies for the individual in Vignette 1. An evidence grid, outlining specific details for each item in the HCR-20 V3, is included in the appendix to ensure transparency and accountability in the risk assessment process.

Risk Assessment with the HCR-20v3 Across Genders, Subsamples, and Time-Frames Diane S. Strub, 2016 One of the most well-established violence risk assessment schemes, the HCR-20: Assessing Risk for Violence Manual, Version 2

(HCR-20v2; Historical/Clinical/Risk Management-20), has recently been revised. The present study evaluated the performance of the new HCR-20v3 in a sample of 119 participants on probation or recently discharged into the community (i.e., from incarceration or short-term psychiatric hospitalization). The HCR-20v3 demonstrated concurrent validity with the HCR-20v2 and was predictive, prospectively, of whether, and how rapidly, participants engaged in violence. The SRRs added incrementally to the presence and relevance scores. Generally, no moderation effects of subsample type were noted, with the exception of the impact of subsample on the ability of the C subscale to predict the likelihood of verbal violence, as well as its impact on the SRRs, which might more strongly predict violence for the participants who were receiving short-term psychiatric inpatient care. As pertains to gender, some moderation effects were observed at 6 weeks for violence and physical violence, but this was no longer the case at 8 months. However, the H relevance rating may be more strongly predictive of time to physical violence in women, than it is in men. Moreover, the HCR-20v3 components generally demonstrated a relationship to violent victimization, whereas they did not do so for suicide. Some ratings might exhibit a relationship to self-harm. There was no moderation effect of subsample type on the ability of HCR-20v3 to forecast violent victimization. The HCR-20v3 components were not predictive of violent victimization, suicide, or self-harm in men at 6 weeks, but some demonstrated a relationship with violent victimization at 8 months. For women, some of HCR-20v3 components were predictive of violent victimization and self-harm for both time-frames. The H presence score was more predictive of violent victimization in women. Generally, the higher the scores on all HCR-20v3 presence ratings, the sooner participants were violently victimized and there was no moderation effect of subsample type. However, there was a moderation effect of gender on the ability of the C subscale to forecast the imminence of this outcome, and this may also be the case for the total presence score.

Essential Writings in Violence Risk Assessment and Management Christopher D. Webster, Hy Bloom, 2007 With Essential Writings in Violence Risk Assessment and Management, mental health and legal practitioners have quick access to the most important peer-reviewed writings in the field. The 31 journal articles and book chapters in this collection provide a complete foundational curriculum on the subject. Topics include: - the historical shift from dangerousness to violence risk assessment - the emergence of actuarial violence prediction - clinical prediction and assessment - the actuarial versus clinical controversy - decision making - treatments, security and program planning. Covering a field that crosses civil, forensic and correctional boundaries, this book is a valuable resource for clinicians, lawyers, judges, law enforcement officials, health and correctional administrators, journalists and anyone working in the forensic system. It is also of interest to anyone intrigued by how the forensic system assesses and manages people deemed to be violent, and how decision makers manage the often precarious balance between protecting the public and according the accused the greatest degree of freedom possible. The book's six main sections are preceded by introductions, written by the editors, that succinctly encapsulate the main arguments discussed by its contributors. Taken together, these introductions provide a concise summary of a complex topic.

Dynamic Risk Factors in Violence Risk Assessment Adam Joseph Evans Blanchard, 2013 The consideration of dynamic risk factors when conducting risk assessments is generally considered best practice. However, little empirical research can speak to intraindividual change over time in putatively dynamic risk factors included in violence risk assessments instruments, and even fewer studies can speak to whether this change is associated with violence. The present study investigated change on putatively dynamic scales included on the Historical-Clinical-Risk Management-20 (HCR-20) and the Short-Term Assessment of Risk and Treatability (START), using a prospective repeated measures design with a civil psychiatric and a correctional sample. Intraindividual change on these scales was seen in a notable proportion of the assessments. More change was seen on the HCR-20 when the reassessment interval was over two months compared to less than two months, whereas the proportion of change on the START scales was consistent across different reassessment intervals. As well, fluctuations on these scales were predictive of subsequent violence.

The SAGE Encyclopedia of Criminal Psychology Robert D. Morgan, 2019-04-25 The SAGE Encyclopedia of Criminal Psychology will be a modern, interdisciplinary resource aimed at students and professionals interested in the intersection of psychology (e.g., social, forensic, clinical), criminal justice, sociology, and criminology. The interdisciplinary study of human behavior in legal contexts includes numerous topics on criminal behavior, criminal justice policies and legal process, crime detection and prevention, eyewitness identification, prison life, offender assessment and rehabilitation, risk assessment and management, offender mental health, community reintegration, and juvenile offending. The study of these topics has been increasing continually since the late 1800s, with people trained in many legal professions such as policing, social work, law, academia, mental health, and corrections. This will be a comprehensive work that will provide the most current empirical information on those topics of greatest concern to students who desire to work in these fields. This encyclopedia is a unique reference work that looks at criminal behavior primarily through a scientific lens. With over 500 entries the book brings together top empirically driven researchers and clinicians across multiple fields—psychology, criminology, social work, and sociology—to explore the field.

Seminars in Forensic Psychiatry Mary Davoren, Harry G. Kennedy, 2024-06-13 This updated edition of Seminars in Forensic Psychiatry is an invaluable guide for consultants and specialist trainees working in forensic psychiatry. The book also includes sections on specialist areas of need, including cultural and gender specific needs, terrorism, stalkers, and sex offenders. Risk Assessment and Management of Known Sexual and Violent Offenders Hazel Kemshall, Great Britain. Home Office. Research, Development and Statistics Directorate. Policing and Reducing Crime Unit, 2001 The role of Public Protection Panels is to assess and manage sexual and violent offenders in the community. The Panels' decisions are made on the basis of information from a range of risk assessment methods. This report provides an overview of the different means of risk assessment and management for such offenders.

The Assessment and Treatment of Women Offenders Kelley Blanchette, Shelley L. Brown, 2006-08-07 There is a large body of research that provides guidance for those working with offenders on how they should be treated once they are in the correctional system. The problem is that most, if not all this research has been conducted on all male populations and it is assumed that women offenders are the same. However, women have different needs and support systems than men in some areas of their lives and it is unclear whether all research based on men can be generalized in this way. The book provides a review of the research literature to guide evidence-based practice in the assessment and treatment of adult female offenders. An historical overview of women's crime and imprisonment will be followed by a global review of various theories of female criminality. The remainder of the book reviews the psychology of criminal conduct, with a specific focus on three psychological principles of effective intervention: risk, need and responsivity. Respectively, these principles set the "who", "what" and "how" for correctional intervention.
