Morocco Bela Balassa, World Bank, 1984 The manufacturing sector plays an important role in the Moroccan economy.

Spurred by the growth of domestic demand and heightened protection of the domestic market, industrial production expanded rapidly during the 1960s. The import substitution strategy was stepped up, but despite a sharp rise in investment in 1972-77 there was only a temporary surge in the growth rate of the industrial sector with respect to the previous period, and since 1978 manufacturing output has stagnated. The economic and financial projections in this report indicate that the current account deficit of the balance of payments will remain at around US$2 billion during 1983-85 if an export promotion policy is not put into effect. This report proposes a revision of industrial policy, aiming at improving the system of incentives for production, improving the system of taxation and promotion of industrial investment, and providing for the financing of investment. Implementation of these measures would bring about a better allocation of resources and a reduction in the balance of payments deficit.
