Occupational Therapy for People Experiencing Illness, Injury or Impairment E-Book (previously entitled Occupational Therapy and Physical Dysfunction) Michael Curtin, Mary Egan, Jo Adams, 2016-12-16 The sixth edition of this classic book remains a key text for occupational therapists, supporting their practice in working with people with physical impairments, stimulating reflection on the knowledge, skills and attitudes which inform practice, and encouraging the development of occupation-focused practice. Within this book, the editors have addressed the call by leaders within the profession to ensure that an occupational perspective shapes the skills and strategies used within occupational therapy practice. Rather than focusing on discrete diagnostic categories the book presents a range of strategies that, with the use of professional reasoning, can be transferred across practice settings. The new editors have radically updated the book, in response to the numerous internal and external influences on the profession, illustrating how an occupational perspective underpins occupational therapy practice. A global outlook is intrinsic to this edition of the book, as demonstrated by the large number of contributors recruited from across the world. - Covers everything the student needs within the physical disorders part of their course - Links theory of principles to practice and management - Written and edited by a team of internationally experienced OT teachers, clinicians and managers - Gives key references and further reading lists for more detailed study - Written within a framework of lifespan development in line with current teaching and practice - Includes practice scenarios and case studies - Focuses on strategies - New title echoes the contemporary strength-based and occupation-focused nature of occupational therapy practice which involves working with people and not medical conditions and diagnoses - Content and structure reviewed and shaped by an international panel of students/new graduates - 22 additional chapters - 100 expert international contributors - Evolve Resources - evolve.elsevier.com/Curtin/OT - contains: - 3 bonus interactive practice stories with reflective videos - 360 MCQs - 200 reflective questions - 250 downloadable images - Critical discussion of the ICF in the context of promoting occupation and participation - Pedagogical features: summaries, key points, and multiple choice and short answer reflective questions

Human Occupation. Introduction to the Theory and Practice of Occupational Therapy Linda Mathews, 2011-11 Essay from the year 2008 in the subject English - Miscellaneous, grade: 60%, South Bank University London (London South Bank University, UK), 23 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: The definition of the concept of quality of life (QOL) has long been debated with contributions varying according to the different scientific disciplines, including social sciences, psychology, geography, philosophy, health economics, advertising, medical science, and history (Bowling 1995; Faruqhar 1995, Liddle & McKenna 2000). Taking into account the difficulty of defining QOL (Bowling 1995) this essay will critically discuss the suggestion that ...the experience of quality of life is not dependent upon the quantifiable, material conditions of life but upon subjective, qualitative factors: the content of life (Hammell 2004, p299). Beginning with a brief definition of the concept QOL in relation to the concept of human occupation and the philosophy of occupational therapy (OT), it will be discussed whether quantifiable conditions in terms of socio-economic resources and measurable physical function are appropriate indicators for QOL. The discussion will then move towards the question of a suitable approach to QOL measurement and explain the implications for the role of OT. In an attempt to define the concept of QOL, Zhan (1992) proposes an example of a conceptual model which speaks of four measurable dimensions of QOL, namely: life satisfaction, self-concept, health and functioning and socio-economic factors (Zhan 1992, p796), and suggests, in consensus with Liddle & McKenna (2000), that QOL is both, a subjective as well as an objective concept. Niemi et al (1988) prefer to define QOL as referring to a person's subjective wellbeing and life satisfaction, which includes health, material well-being, interpersonal relationships, as well as personal development, work and recreation (Niemi et al, cited in Mayers 2000, p591).

What Factors Enable Therapists To Engage In The Occupation Of Evidence-Informed Occupational Therapy Practice Danielle Harling, 2016 Engaging in evidence informed practice is an important competency for occupational therapy practice in Canada. The purpose of this qualitative study was to understand how occupational therapists are currently using evidence in practice. Ten occupational therapists working in a tertiary care hospital participated in semi-structured qualitative interviews that informed the findings of this study. The Canadian Model of Occupational Performance and Engagement was used as a framework to understand and discuss how these therapists used evidence to inform their practice. All participants actively engaged in the occupation of evidence informed occupational therapy practice. They interacted with evidence by adapting it and translating it to effect change in practice and support their clients. They also shared their experiences with colleagues in order to support engagement with evidence among members of their practice community. The practice environment influenced how participants implemented evidence and provided opportunities to develop ongoing encouragement and support.

PISA Reading for Change: Performance and Engagement Across Countries Irwin S. Kirsch, Programme for International Student Assessment, Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, 2002 This report, based upon the results of the 2000 Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) survey, examines reading literacy levels of students aged 15 years old in 32 countries, in terms of how well they can use written materials to meet the challenges of the real world and to become lifelong learners. The report reveals that some countries manage to combine high overall results with relatively small differences among students, whilst others have significantly large numbers of students capable of only the most basic reading tasks. More specifically, in some countries there are particularly wide inequalities in the ability of students to deal with written materials, such as graphs or forms. Overall, students from more advantaged backgrounds performed better on average, although the gap varied across countries; and female students performed better than male students in every country. Notably, those students who expressed positive attitudes to reading and spent time reading for pleasure were, on average much better readers.
