Estrategia internacional de la gran empresa mexicana en la década de los noventa María de los Angeles Pozas, 2002 Los grandes grupos económicos y sus empresas industriales ocuparon un lugar central en el proyecto de apertura y liberalización económica adoptado por el gobierno mexicano a fines de los ochenta. Se esperaba que al ser favorecidos por la política económica, los grupos empresariales que los dirigen se convertirían en propulsores del desarrollo

y que con su actividad productiva y sus vínculos con la economía internacional reactivarían la economía del país al integrar al resto de las empresas nacionales en el proceso de modernización, lo que habría dado lugar a un ciclo de crecimiento económico. Este libro reúne los resultados de la investigación realizada entre 1990 y 1998 en seis grandes consorcios regiomontanos Alfa, Cemex, Cydsa, Femsa, Imsa, y Vitro- pioneros en el proceso de integración de la industria nacional a la nueva economía global. La investigación parte de una caracterización del sistema productivo mundial que plantea que el sistema de producción fordista, basado en el predominio de las corporaciones verticalmente integradas, tiende a ser reemplazado por un modelo de subcontratación internacional.
