Artist Residencies as Complex Contexts for Creative Growth Carianna D. Arredondo, 2021 Contemporary artist residencies are institutions or programs that enable artists to develop their practice beyond the confines of their typical work setting. Increasingly, they are also a means to access significant material, interpersonal, and professional resources, and a medium through which to engage with local communities. In response to these developments, the present interview-based study aims to understand how artists develop within a community context by investigating the work and experiences of eight artists who have participated in community-based residencies across--and sometimes beyond--the United States. By collecting each artist's narrative and supplementing it with documents, images, and auto-reflections of their artwork, the study investigates the complex network of characteristics that help facilitate the creative process. Furthermore, by canvassing research from fields like social psychology, business management, and arts education, it explores the relations of educational reciprocity that emerge between artists and residency communities.

Artist in Residence , 2021 Artist in Residence is a collection of 50 submissions from artists around the world who were all asked to respond to a simple prompt: what is an artwork or performance we can all do at home while sheltering in place? The responses range from craft to cooking and from conversation to meditation, providing a snapshot of the varied forms creation can take in a time of quarantine. The project was conceived in March 2020 during one of the first periods of lockdowns and social distancing measures implemented in response to the Covid-19 pandemic. Proceeds raised from the sale of this book will be donated to the Foundation for Contemporary Arts to support artists in need.
