Non-Governmental Organizations and Development David Lewis, Nazneen Kanji, 2009-09-10 Non-governmental organizations (NGOs) are high profile actors in the field of international development, both as providers of services to vulnerable individuals and communities and as campaigning policy advocates. This book provides a critical introduction to the wide-ranging topic of NGOs and development. Written by two authors with more than twenty years experience of research and practice in the field, the book combines a critical overview of the main research literature with a set of up-to-date theoretical and practical insights drawn from experience in Asia, Europe, Africa and elsewhere. It highlights the importance of NGOs in development, but it also engages fully with the criticisms that the increased profile of NGOs in development now attracts. Non-Governmental Organizations and Development begins with a discussion of the wide diversity of NGOs and their roles, and locates their recent rise to prominence within broader histories of struggle as well as within the ideological context of neo-liberalism. It then moves on to analyze how interest in NGOs has both reflected and informed wider theoretical trends and debates within development studies, before analyzing NGOs and their practices, using a broad range of short case studies of successful and unsuccessful interventions. David Lewis and Nazneen Kanji then moves on to describe the ways in which NGOs are increasingly important in relation to ideas and debates about 'civil society', globalization and the changing ideas and practices of international aid. The book argues that NGOs are now central to development theory and practice and are likely to remain important actors in development in the years to come. In order to appreciate the issues raised by their increasing diversity and complexity, the authors conclude that it is necessary to deploy a historically and theoretically informed perspective. This critical overview will be useful to students of development studies at undergraduate and masters levels, as well as to more general readers and practitioners. The format of the book includes figures, photographs and case studies as well as reader material in the form of summary points and questions. Despite the growing importance of the topic, no single short, up-to-date book exists that sets out the main issues in the form of a clearly written, academically-informed text: until now.

The Role of Non-governmental Organisations in Rural Development Abu Elias Sarker,1996

Civil Society and the European Union: The Mutual Influence Between EU Institutions and Czech Non-Government Organisations Before and After EU-accession Vanessa Buth,2007-07-29 Essay from the year 2006 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Region: Eastern Europe, grade: 1,0, Charles University in Prague (Social Sciences), 41 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: Since the fall of communism CEE countries are undergoing a revival of civil society, also referred to as the 'third sector', which emerged after restrictions imposed under the communist party were abolished. The concept of civil society in its broader sense is the part of a society that exists next to state and market, the London school of Economics Civil Society department refers to it as the arena of uncoerced collective action around shared interests, purposes and values. This collective action is formed by voluntary civic and social organisations or institutions referred to as non-profit organisations (NPOs) and non-governmental organisations (NGOs). This phenomenon is of high interest considering the current European wide dispute over the role civil society should have next to government and business. European institutions have been trying to enhance the development of NGOs in Central and Eastern European (CEE) countries through financial as well as institutional help. The EU enlargement was assumed to even further encourage the development of NGOs in CEE countries. Thus, the Czech Republic, one of the first aspirants of the CEE countries entering the EU, is considered to be a prime example to show how the mutual relation between the non-governmental sector in CEE countries and the EU institutions developed. To be able to define the politics and policies for future assistance of the European Union to CEE NGOs, two aspects are of special importance. One, it is necessary to understand the success NGOs in CEE countries have had in terms of succeeding to promote their interests in EU decision-making before and after the accession. Second, it is crucial to determine the role the European Union has played in the achievement of their goals.

Beyond Regional Autonomy Syarif Hidayat,2003 The study of local state elites' perspectives on decentralisation and local autonomy is very critical in understanding the nature of Indonesian politics and in the process towards the better implementation of Law No. 22/1999 and Law No. 25/1999. The reason for this is simply, as Alagrappa (1995:28) stated, because the elite groups have greater control over the power resources, shared norms and consent among the elite are more important than among the general public. Similarly, Liddle (1996: 110-111) among others, also supports this argument by saying that the explanation of policy making (in Indonesia) lies not in the interests of the state qua state but in the behaviour of the key actors, as those actors formulate their goals, perceive constraints and opportunities and calculate means to deal with them. By taking into account the above propositions as the points of departure, this book attempts to delineate the Indonesia's local state elites' perspectives on decentralisation and local autonomy. It specifically focuses on two issues. The first is to describe how the local state elites have defined decentralization and local autonomy, and what are, in their opinion, the main goals for decentralisation and local autonomy. The second is to illuminate the local state elites' personal comments upon the current setting of local government's authority and central-local governments' financial relationship--P. v-vi.
