Beyond Pity. Owen, Auden, and the Enduring Ethics of War and Displacement Vivienne Suvini-Hand, 2025-10-06
Academic Paper from the year 2025 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, Royal Holloway, University of London, language: English, abstract: This article offers a comparative reading of Wilfred Owen's 'Disabled' and W.H. Auden's 'Refugee Blues'. It explores how both poets critique the limitations of 'pity' in response to wartime suffering. While each poem elicits compassion for marginalized victims of war—the maimed soldier in Owen's text and the displaced Jewish refugees in Auden's—the article argues that such compassion is presented as being ethically insufficient if it remains in a passive state. Drawing on affect theory (Ahmed), trauma theory (Caruth, LaCapra), ethical criticism (Levinas) and Marxist critique (Eagleton), it aims to demonstrate how, through their use of irony, their depiction of marginalization, and their critique of bureaucratic systems and institutions, Owen and Auden transform 'pity' into a moral indictment. Ultimately, they challenge the reader not just to feel, but to confront their complicity in a world where suffering is commodified, displaced, and often ignored.

The Oxford Handbook of British and Irish War Poetry Tim Kendall, 2007-02-22 Thirty-seven chapters, written by leading literary critics from across the world, describe the latest thinking about twentieth-century war poetry. The book maps both the uniqueness of each war and the continuities between poets of different wars, while the interconnections between the literatures of war and peacetime, and between combatant and civilian poets, are fully considered. The focus is on Britain and Ireland, but links are drawn with the poetry of the United States and continental Europe. The Oxford Handbook feeds a growing interest in war poetry and offers, in toto, a definitive survey of the terrain. It is intended for a broad audience, made up of specialists and also graduates and undergraduates, and is an essential resource for both scholars of particular poets and for those interested in wider debates about modern poetry. This scholarly and readable assessment of the field will provide an important point of reference for decades to come.

Modernist Parasites Sebastian Williams, 2023-08-22 Modernist Parasites: Bioethics, Dependency, and Literature, Post-1900 analyzes biological and social parasites in the political, scientific, and literary imagination. With the rise of Darwinism, eugenics, and parasitology in the late nineteenth century, Sebastian Williams posits that the “parasite” came to be humanity’s ultimate other—a dangerous antagonist. But many authors such as Isaac Rosenberg, John Steinbeck, Franz Kafka, Clarice Lispector, Nella Larsen, and George Orwell reconsider parasitism. Ultimately, parasites inherently depend on others for their survival, illustrating the limits of ethical models that privilege the discrete individual above interdependent communities.
