The Science of Footwear Ravindra S. Goonetilleke,2012-11-06 Although we now have sophisticated algorithms and techniques for determining the shapes and sizes and for matching the fit between shoes and feet, few, if any, of the books currently available cover these new technologies until now. Bringing together high-quality and state-of-the-art contributions from designers, biomechanists, ergonomists, engineers, podiatrists, and scientists from industry and academia, The Science of Footwear provides an in-depth understanding of the technology and techniques involved in the design and development of a popular and demanding consumer product. This book introduces the design, development, manufacturing, and marketing of footwear. The chapters contain data from past research and the state-of-the art methodologies. They not only cover every aspect of the product design, but also how the footwear industry caters to the wide-ranging needs of sophisticated and demanding customers. The footwear industry has rapidly changed over the last 10 years. Mass production has changed to personalization and mass customization, areas that are not well-understood. This book explores these different concepts in a coherent way, drawing on differing views that give a holistic view of the science behind footwear. Collating information from different disciplines, the book provides the tools to develop the next generation of footwear.

Caring For Your Elderly Parent Kate Sumner,2019-06-01 Today, more than two million Australians are over 70 years of age; by the year 2050 seniors are likely to make up almost 30 percent of the population. The implications of this are not just political; they are very personal. At some stage in life, most of us will help an elderly friend, parent, partner, relative or spouse make important decisions about their health and wellbeing, housing, care, finances, legal affairs and end of life care. This book has been written for any Australian who loves and cares for an elderly parent or other person, anyone responsible for an elderly persons wellbeing, or who simply wants to prepare for their own future. It includes practical strategies for assessing older peoples needs; dealing with family dynamics; finding home help; preventing falls and other accidents; moving into an aged care home; managing financial and legal affairs; and getting the best possible medical and end-of-life care.

Stepping On: Building Confidence and Reducing Falls 3rd edn Lindy Clemson, Megan Swann, 2019-11-01 The Stepping On program is a community-based falls-prevention program that shows participants how to reduce falls, increase confidence and maintain personal independence. Originally developed in Australia, based on research and scientifically proven to work, the Stepping On program is now internationally recognised as best practice in falls prevention. The Stepping On manual is aimed at health workers with a passion for aged care. It offers a step-by-step guide to running the seven-week group program, plus essential background information. Topics covered include understanding the risk of falls, identifying home hazards, the role of vision in causing and preventing falls, staying safe in public places, strength and balance exercises, and much more. The manual includes a guide to useful resources, handouts for group participants, and suggestions for recruitment and evaluation. This new edition has been thoroughly revised and redesigned to incorporate cutting-edge research, professional feedback, and over fifteen years' experience of running of the program. As well as the latest fall-prevention research, the revised manual contains an expanded section on working with culturally and linguistically diverse groups, simplified exercises for participants to do at home, and new stories and illustrations. 'This is an invaluable manual incorporating the latest evidence for falls prevention in the community.' Professor Lyn March AM, University of Sydney and Royal North Shore Hospital, Sydney 'This new Stepping On manual will be a wonderful resource for many health professionals like myself who work with patients who have had falls and fractures. It is definitely my "go-to" resource in our very busy clinic!' Lillias Nairn, North Shore Ryde Health Service A range of handouts and supplementary materials are available for download. Please click on the Table of Contents tab for links to download the supplementary materials.

Falls in Older People Stephen Ronald Lord, Catherine Sherrington, Vasi Naganathan, 2021 The aim of this third edition of our book is to review and incorporate this new material to provide researchers, students, and health care workers with a means for gaining access to current thinking and best clinical practice. Listed below are some highlights of progress and encouraging findings. Studies aimed at understanding balance have used paradigms such as tripping, slipping, and stepping to more accurately reflect situations in which people fall. A large body of neuropsychological research has shown that balance activities that were generally considered to be reflex or automatic require attention, and that impaired executive functioning is an important risk factor for falls. New wearable sensor technologies have allowed mobility and fall risk to be remotely assessed, paving the way for unobtrusive at-home monitoring. Several cognitive-motor interventions comprising exergames have been evaluated in randomized controlled trials, where they have been shown to improve balance. These may be an enjoyable way to facilitate adherence. Cognitive behavior therapy in association with exercise can substantially reduce fear of falling. Systematic reviews have synthesized the findings of randomized controlled trials have examined the effects of a range of exercise interventions in preventing falls in community dwellers. From this large body of evidence, it is now possible to conclude that effective exercise programs must comprise challenging, weight-bearing balance exercises. It is less clear how to prevent falls in residential care, but a recent well-designed randomized controlled trial has shown that an exercise intervention can prevent falls in nursing home residents. Several fall prevention interventions have now also been demonstrated to be cost-effective, again particularly exercise interventions in community dwellers--

A Seniors Guide to Fall Prevention and Healthy Living Roxanne Reynolds,2011-11-01 Have you fallen in the past or know someone who has? Do you have aging parents, or are you concerned about falling yourself? If the answer is yes, then this fall-prevention handbook is for you. Roxanne Reynolds has spent the past ten years working with seniors and those with movement disorders. Because of her love for seniors and the fact that her own grandmother fell and broke both of her hips, she knew she had to try and do something to help prevent catastrophic falls so prevalent today. In A Seniors Guide to Fall Prevention and Healthy Living, Roxanne outlines causes, diseases affiliated with falls, home safety, foot health, diet, nutrition, and activities that promote balanced movement.

The Use of the Appropriate Footwear in Fall Prevention Among the Adult Population Evyline Chioma,2020 Falls among the older population is a public health issue. Many studies have outlined ways to decrease the risk of falls among this population. The use of multifactorial, multi-component, and single-component fall prevention intervention methods are recommended by the American Geriatrics Society/British Geriatrics Society Clinical Practice Guideline for Prevention of Falls in Older Persons. Home modifications, exercises for balance improvement, strengthening and gait improvement, medication management, and footwear management are outlined in AG S/BGS CPG as multifactorial, multi-component components or, when used alone, as a single intervention. The role footwear plays in fall prevention is mostly overlooked. Most older adults, their caregivers, and health practitioners are unaware that specific footwear features can contribute to falls. Occupational therapists are uniquely skilled in the therapeutic use of self, and occupation-based treatment to improve occupational outcomes, including fall prevention, to enhance the client's occupational independence or population. This capstone project is a program proposal that will synthesize evidence to justify the effectiveness of multifactorial and multi-component fall prevention intervention with a focus on the use of appropriate footwear to decrease the risk of falls. Asynchronous online learning will be developed to teach healthcare practitioners the effective fall prevention intervention methods while highlighting footwear association with falling among the older population. This education program will occur at the VA Medical Center in Wilmington, Delaware. It will be a part of a new-hire orientation for healthcare practitioners for newly-hired healthcare workers.

Falls Aren't Funny Russell J. Kendzior,2010-01-16 Slip-and-fall accidents are a growing problem. The total cost of these accidents now approaches 80 billion dollars each year, and that number is expected to double within the next decade. In Falls Aren't Funny: America's Multi-Billion Dollar Slip-and-Fall Crisis, author Russell J. Kendzior provides a comprehensive look at one of the most pervasive yet seldom addressed problems facing our world today. The book's three parts explore slips-and-fall accidents themselves, what causes them, and what can be done to prevent them. Kendzior begins by examining the financial costs, the industries hardest hit by slips and falls, and the heightened risk to the elderly population. He then looks at the causes for the numerous slip-and-fall accidents and injuries, from inadequate floor care to improper footwear, and the contributions of the insurance, legal, and manufacturing industries and how they worsen the problem. Finally, he outlines what can be done to prevent slip-and-fall accidents, and how everyone from manufacturers, to property owners, to the general public can help to reverse the trend of this increasingly expensive and dangerous problem. The book is replete with stories of real slip-and-fall accidents and injuries, up-to-date statistics, illustrative charts, and tips for prevention. It is comprehensive, dealing with all aspects of slip-and-fall accidents, their causes, and methods of prevention, while also being accessible and entertaining. It is an informative and much needed book for all managers, safety professionals, attorneys, business and property owners, and anyone else concerned with one of the nation's fastest growing safety crises.
