Beyond Pity. Owen, Auden, and the Enduring Ethics of War and Displacement Vivienne Suvini-Hand, 2025-10-06
Academic Paper from the year 2025 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, Royal Holloway, University of London, language: English, abstract: This article offers a comparative reading of Wilfred Owen's 'Disabled' and W.H. Auden's 'Refugee Blues'. It explores how both poets critique the limitations of 'pity' in response to wartime suffering. While each poem elicits compassion for marginalized victims of war—the maimed soldier in Owen's text and the displaced Jewish refugees in Auden's—the article argues that such compassion is presented as being ethically insufficient if it remains in a passive state. Drawing on affect theory (Ahmed), trauma theory (Caruth, LaCapra), ethical criticism (Levinas) and Marxist critique (Eagleton), it aims to demonstrate how, through their use of irony, their depiction of marginalization, and their critique of bureaucratic systems and institutions, Owen and Auden transform 'pity' into a moral indictment. Ultimately, they challenge the reader not just to feel, but to confront their complicity in a world where suffering is commodified, displaced, and often ignored.

It strikes a balance between the need for social workers to understand the social, economic, cultural and psychological factors which give rise to clients' problems, and the need to know how best to respond with practical measures.

Modernist Parasites Sebastian Williams, 2023-08-22 Modernist Parasites: Bioethics, Dependency, and Literature, Post-1900 analyzes biological and social parasites in the political, scientific, and literary imagination. With the rise of Darwinism, eugenics, and parasitology in the late nineteenth century, Sebastian Williams posits that the "parasite" came to be humanity's ultimate other—a dangerous antagonist. But many authors such as Isaac Rosenberg, John Steinbeck, Franz Kafka, Clarice Lispector, Nella Larsen, and George Orwell reconsider parasitism. Ultimately, parasites inherently depend on others for their survival, illustrating the limits of ethical models that privilege the discrete individual above interdependent communities.
