Handbook of Engineering Practice of Materials and Corrosion Jung-Chul (Thomas) Eun, 2020-09-04 This handbook is an in-depth guide to the practical aspects of materials and corrosion engineering in the energy and chemical industries. The book covers materials, corrosion, welding, heat treatment, coating, test and inspection, and mechanical design and integrity. A central focus is placed on industrial requirements, including codes, standards, regulations, and specifications that practicing material and corrosion engineers and technicians face in all roles and in all areas of responsibility. The comprehensive resource provides expert guidance on general corrosion mechanisms and recommends materials for the control and prevention of corrosion damage, and offers readers industry-tested best practices, rationales, and case studies.

Environmentally Acceptable Materials for the Corrosion Protection of Steel Bridges , 1997 The recently promulgated environmental regulations concerning volatile organic compounds (VOC) and certain hazardous heavy metals have had a great impact on the bridge painting industry. As a response to these regulations, many of the major coating manufacturers now offer environmentally acceptable alternative coating systems to replace those traditionally used on bridge structures. The Federal Highway Administration sponsored a 7-year study to determine the relative corrosion control performance of these newly available coating systems. The most promising coating systems were selected for long-term field evaluation based on accelerated test performance. The long-term exposure testing was conducted for 5 years in three marine locations. Panels were exposed on two bridges, one in New Jersey and one in southern Louisiana. The third long-term exposure location was in Sea Isle City, New Jersey. Thirteen coating systems were included for long-term exposure testing.

Modified Abrasive Blast/chemical Stabilizer Admixtures for Deleading Immersed Steel Structures Coated with Lead-based Paint Curt Gustafson,Vincent F. Hock,V. F. Hock,1997 While the use of lead-based paint (LBP) has been broadly banned, old LBP remains on many structures, creating problems as these structures require maintenance and repainting. Tight environmental regulations control paint removal operations that involve LBP to ensure that the surrounding air, land, and water environments are not contaminated. In this study, USACERL modified existing chemical stabilizer/ abrasive blast admixtures to enable removal of LBP from immersed structural steel and concrete surfaces. The modified abrasive blasting admixture effectively stabilizes the heavy metal paint waste during the removal process. This project produced and demonstrated: (1) industry specifications and user guidance for the removal of hazardous paints from immersed surfaces, (2) formulations for chemical stabilizers added to abrasive blast media, (3) an engineering and environmental assessment of effects on subsequent coating life, (4) methods for dust control and facility containment during blasting, (5) tests to verify the long-term stability of the hazardous heavy metal paint waste in a landfill, and (6) possible recycling options for the abrasive blast residue.
