Sustainable Hospitality and Tourism as Motors for Development Philip Sloan, Claudia Simons-Kaufman, Willy Legrand, 2012 It is now widely agreed that the climate is changing, global resources are diminishing and biodiversity is suffering. Developing countries - many of them considered by the World Tourism Organization to be 'Top Emerging Tourism Destinations' (UNWTO, 2009) - are already suffering the full frontal effect of environmental degradation. The challenge for developing countries is a triple-edged sword, how can economic prosperity be achieved without the perpetual depletion of nature's reserves, the destruction of rural habitat and the dislocation of traditional societies? Many emerging nations are looking increasingly to the tourism industry as the motor for economic development, with hospitality businesses at the forefront. This book uses twenty-five case studies to demonstrate how it is possible to create income and stimulate regional socio-economic development by using sustainable hospitality and tourism attractions. These case studies focus on issues such as the protection of indigenous cultures as a source of touristic curiosity; the preservation of the environment and the protection of endangered species - such as the plight of turtles in Sri Lanka or butterflies in Costa Rica to encourage tourism. Some cases cover government supported projects, for example, the green parks venture and regional tourism development in the Philippines, an archaeological park initiative in Honduras and the diversity of nature tourism in St. Vincent. Sustainable Hospitality and Tourism as Motors for Development is designed to give students, academics and practitioners a guide for best practices of sustainable hospitality operations in developing countries. Based on case studies, it provides a road map of how to achieve the goals of sustainability giving benchmark examples. The book not only taps into a contemporary business subject, but aims to provide readers with a better understanding of how sustainable theories can be put into practice in hospitality and tourism industries in developing countries.

Sustainability in the Hospitality Industry Joseph Chen, Philip Sloan, Willy Legrand, 2010-05-04 A clear understanding of the issues surrounding climate change, global warming, air and water pollution, ozone depletion, deforestation, the loss of biodiversity and global poverty is essential for every manager in the hospitality industry. Present and future hospitality executives need to know how sustainable management systems can be integrated into their businesses while maintaining and hopefully improving the bottom line. Sustainability in the Hospitality Industry explores innovative ways to tackle the ever increasing costs of energy and water as well as the moral, ethical, social and political arguments for taking action. This book uses case studies throughout to explore the following key issues: * how can hospitality properties and equipment be designed to use less resources? * what are the benefits of using more sustainable food and beverage sources? * how can environmental impacts be reduced and profitability increased? * how can properties integrate sustainability management systems and stay one step ahead of the competition? * how can the reputation of a hospitality operation be improved to attract investment by incorporating responsible marketing and corporate social responsibility policies? Sustainability in the Hospitality Industry contains stimulating new ideas, solutions, and strategies essential to every student and professional in the hospitality industry. Regional Innovation Systems - An Analysis of Innovation Policy Instruments Michael Bison, 2007-02-01

Inhaltsangabe: Abstract: Innovation is essential for the competitiveness of companies within the globalised knowledge economy. In the actual situation of high unemployment rates in most western countries public economy support works thereby actively on the improvement of innovation activity conditions. The regional level is for this attempt the most interesting spatial entity because of its high significance in global economic mechanisms. The questions motivating this master thesis are how regional innovation policy can improve a regional innovation system and which of the possible policy instruments the most effective ones are to combat unemployment. Innovations are the new combination of recent or established knowledge, whose implementation had a noticeable effect on the performance of the organisation, it was implemented in. This includes product, process, organisational and people innovations. Innovations are not anymore an individual effort but a process which involves many actors and institutions. The basis for the exploration of how to support the development and implementation of these innovations is the regional innovation system approach. It divides the innovation process into phases and their linkages and allows identifying analytically the evolved actors and the weaknesses of the innovation process. The analysis of innovation policy instruments assigns each weakness within the innovation process an instrument which is explained and analysed in detail. The examined instruments are competence centres, start-up centres, science parks, networks, regional knowledge management and diffusion agencies. Each instrument's function and its main characteristics get described together with a best practice example, which leads to a conclusion on its effects on innovation and employment. The result of the analysis is that competence centres, start-up centres and science parks are central instruments and have the highest potential for employment effects. Networks, regional knowledge management and diffusion agencies are more supporting measures that improve the performance of the first three. For the success of all instruments, their combination with each other and the utilisation of synergies and dependencies between them is essential. A holistic concept including all instruments is the most effective way to support regional innovation processes. These findings get transferred to the case study region Bonn where, as an example for an [...]

Networking within the Tourism Industry Michael Schumacher, 2010-06-30 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2008 in the subject Tourism - Miscellaneous, grade: 1,8, (International University of Applied Sciences), language: English, abstract: As research around the impacts of Mega Sport Events on host cities and regions reached is peaking in the aftermath of the FIFA World Cup 2006, the UEFA European Football Championship 2008 and the Beijing Summer Games 2008 the topic of cooperation and networking has been widely neglected in regard to MSEs. With the focus on the tourism industry of hosting regions, this work tries to start to change this, as an exploratory approach towards finding out more about the interrelationship of those two topics in tourism. As both, MSEs and cooperation are gaining more and more interest within tourism research this should also be seen as an approach to combine both to motivate further research. Methodologically this is realized by conducting expert interview with five industry experts with valuable experience in preparing, hosting and also benefiting from a Mega Sport Event. The expert interview, as the primary research part of this work is based on the cooperation concept of Axelrod's game theory. This basis was used to design, conduct and analyze the primary research part of this thesis. Essentially, the thesis should be interpreted as a scientific approach to present the combination of the topics of Mega Sport Events and cooperation in tourism.

Mega Sport Events and Their Legacies Shanin Schuessler, 2011-05 Research Paper (postgraduate) from the year 2010 in the subject Tourism, grade: 1.3, International University of Applied Sciences Bad Honnef - Bonn, course: Tourism Policy & Planning, language: English, abstract: This paper analyzes and evaluates the academic research on leveraging policies concerning mega sports events [MSE] such as the Olympics or the FIFA World Cup specifically. Hence, firstly an overall framework is set by defining and categorizing mega events in general before interrelating them to the concept of sport events tourism. Secondly, the author discusses the impacts and related issues of MSEs before highlighting best practices of realized event legacies discussed within the academic literature. The research paper concludes with a summary of the previous discussion into a number of definite 'lessons learned'. The latter corresponds with the overall aim of this research paper as it tries to extract the operational strategies successfully applied in the context of MSE legacy from the available academic literature to support tourism policy makers.

Revenue Management Integration Malte Rücker,2012-01-23 Diploma Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject Tourism - Miscellaneous, grade: 1,8, International University of Applied Sciences (Internationale Hochschule Bad Honnef-Bonn (IUBH)), course: International Tourism and Hospitality Management, language: English, abstract: The diploma thesis assesses the opportunity to implement an integrated approach to revenue management in order to meet the challenges of the competitive tourism environment, which are particularly stemming from the increasing importance of the internet. It is proposed that effective and efficient coordination of the disciplines of revenue management, marketing, sales and e-commerce leads to Revenue Management Integration (RMI), which has a positive effect on financial performance and competitiveness. The thesis aims at identifying key linkages among the disciplines and creates a guideline of how the integration may be achieved. Using multivariate regression, it is tested with 30 hotels, affiliated to eight of the largest hotel chains in Germany, whether Revenue Management Integration is positively related to financial performance. The study showed that integrated revenue management is positively related to RevPAR performance in hotel properties, while the relationship to other profitability measures, such as Return on Equity (ROE) and Operating Profit Margin (OPM) did not yield clear results.

Potential Reduction of Corporate Travel Expenditures Benjamin Heselhaus,2010-03 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2009 in the subject Tourism - Miscellaneous, grade: 2,0, International University of Applied Sciences Bad Honnef - Bonn, language: English, abstract: This bachelor thesis is concerned with the cost reduction potential of travel management tools with regard to business travel expenditures in micro, small, and medium-sized enterprises. For this purpose, primary research in the form of a questionnaire was conducted. The results, which are presented at the end of the thesis, reveal that travel management tools are on the spot for micro, small and medium-sized enterprises but by far not as much that one could say the market is saturated, since 29 percent of the companies are currently applying travel management tools, but more than half of them have not yet thought about the matter. The findings also show that corporate credit cards and online booking engines are by far the most popular tools and that travel policies and online booking engines are the most efficient tools for micro, small, and medium-sized enterprises with respect to their corresponding cost saving potential.

Key Success Factors of New Products / Product Innovations Raffaele Aledda, 2010-10-20 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2007 in the subject Business economics - Offline Marketing and Online Marketing, grade: 1,7, (International University of Applied Sciences), language: English, abstract: The new information age has seen an impressive shift to global markets and cross-border competition, resulting in customers increased expectations for higher quality products, competitive prices and better and faster services. Hence, companies aiming at striving success are focussing more and more on generating fast, innovative, and efficient solutions to satisfy customers' expectations and to create value for shareholder. In view of that, the quest for new products capable to bestow the company with the differential advantage to position itself against its competitors has never been more critical than ever before. However, although innovations are generally seen as the engine of growth, only a small number survive the first year and generate significant value for shareholders. Thus, managers all around the world are keen to identify key factors of success to reduce uncertainty in the new product development process. Yet, history teaches us that product innovation is a complex and dynamic process whose success is difficult to measure, to forecast and which call for talented managers capable to identify and harmonize an array of exogenous, endogenous and consumer perception factors of success simultaneously. Most notably, consumers perception is difficult to map and far more complex to manage. Only new products and innovations that timely offer superior and unique benefits that are perceived as such by customers are marketable and sustainable in the long run and thus generate value for shareholders.

Leading like a scout. Suitability of the Scout role as an indicator of leadership competence Jan Bast, 2021-05-21 Master's Thesis from the year 2021 in the subject Psychology - Industrial and organizational psychology, grade: 1,0, SRH - Mobile University, language: English, abstract: In the context of this work it is to be examined whether the role of the Scout is suitable as an indicator for guidance authority. This is considered to be confirmed if it can be shown that Scouting has a significant influence on the development of leadership competence, or rather imparts relevant competencies that enable Scouts to lead successfully. Therefore, the primary research question is derived from this: Does Scouting influence personal leadership competence? As early as 2006, Handelsblatt wrote about the managers from the campfire and quoted the Swedish King Carl Gustaf as saying Scouts teach leadership skills. A few years later, in April 2019, WirtschaftsWoche published a detailed article on the subject of soft skills entitled Why scouts make good bosses. The author justifies this with a number of soft skills that a Scout acquires at a young age and during his training. These include decision-making skills, conversational skills, project management, group leadership, teamwork and leadership, and generally taking responsibility. These are all competencies that companies often impart to their employees through expensive training courses. If this causality can be confirmed, it would be of great importance, especially for aptitude diagnostics, as it would provide a new indicator for leadership competence. While professional competence can still be demonstrated by relevant work experience in a resume, it becomes much more difficult in the area of personal, social and methodological competence. It should also be taken into account that the demands placed on managers are constantly growing. The megatrends of globalization and digitization are increasingly changing these demands. Intercultural teams working together in different locations around the world are the norm rather than the exception these days. Changes are also taking place at ever shorter intervals due to increasing competition and growing complexity. Through eleven expert interviews with experienced leaders and a retired federal president - who also have Scouting experience - and a qualitative content analysis, this study examines whether Scouting has an influence on personal leadership competence, which leadership competencies are influenced, and which Scouting elements have the greatest influence on leadership competence.
