Never Greater Slaughter Michael Livingston,2021-05-13 'No one has done more than Michael Livingston to revive memories of the battle, and you could not hope for a better guide.' BERNARD CORNWELL Bestselling author of The Last Kingdom series Late in AD 937, four armies met in a place called Brunanburh. On one side stood the shield-wall of the expanding kingdom of the Anglo-Saxons. On the other side stood a remarkable alliance of rival kings - at least two from across the sea - who'd come together to destroy them once and for all. The stakes were no less than the survival of the dream that would become England. The armies were massive. The violence, when it began, was enough to shock a violent age. Brunanburh may not today have the fame of Hastings, Crécy or Agincourt, but those later battles, fought for England, would not exist were it not for the blood spilled this day. Generations later it was still called, quite simply, the 'great battle'. But for centuries, its location has been lost. Today, an extraordinary effort, uniting enthusiasts, historians, archaeologists, linguists, and other researchers - amateurs and professionals, experienced and inexperienced alike - may well have found the site of the long-lost battle of Brunanburh, over a thousand years after its bloodied fields witnessed history. This groundbreaking new book tells the story of this remarkable discovery and delves into why and how the battle happened. Most importantly, though, it is about the men who fought and died at Brunanburh, and how much this forgotten struggle can tell us about who we are and how we relate to our past.

Viking Mersey Stephen Harding,2002 1100 years ago marked the start of a Viking invasion of the Mersey region, which reached out into Chester, West Lancashire and beyond. The Vikings left behind place-names like Kirkby, Kirby, Meols and Croxteth, which can also be found in Iceland, another region they were invading. This book is about these people in peace and war, their customs, traditions, pastimes, their paganism and their Christianity, their governments and their financial centre at Chester. It also includes a section on how modern genetic research is being used to discover the descendants of these Invaders in the modern day population.

The Battlefield Of Brunanburh David P Gregg,2021-01-22 This book describes one of the great mysteries of British history: the lost location of the largest battle ever recorded on our soil; a battle of at least equal importance in our history to the Battle of Hastings. Now it has been found on the Wirral.In 937 AD King Aethelstan of Merica & Wessex, grandson of Alfred the Great, defeated an invading triple army composed of Norse-Irish from the Kingdom of Dublin, Scots from the Kingdom of Alba and Celts from the Kingdom of Strathclyde. Many ancient Chronicles, including the Anglo Saxon Chronicle and Egil's Saga, described this Battle of Brunanburh as the largest battle fought on English soil, where five kings, seven earls and a huge host of men was slain. It was Brunanburh which cemented the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of England as a stable entity and laid the foundations of Great Britain. After it Aethelstan styled himself with some justification as King of All The British. Despite the importance of Brunanburh the place of the battlefield has remained disputed for centuries with over thirty sites claiming ownership. The author has looked in detail at the clues in the chronicles and in particular Egil's Saga, comparing the battle and battlefield descriptions with the geography of the Wirral peninsula in Cheshire using old Ordnance Survey maps, tithe field maps, aerial photography and Lidar scans. Considering the meaning of place names in early English, Old Norse, Irish and Welsh and later local dialects the number of battle, weapon and death related names is surprising. The author has been able to define the main battlefield area and tentatively, the several escape routes across Wirral through known Viking settlement centres to ports and river landing places known to be used by 10th century shipping. This desk research is strong evidence for the battlefield location. However in the last two years Wirral Archaeology, following the same clues as the author, has identified a large camp site to the south of the proposed battle centre which apparently was a post-battle weapon recovery site. The several hundred weapon items found, dated by experts to the 10th century, along with thousands of iron fragments and evidence of metal smelting, confirm a major battle in this area. The author believes this ridge site was also the camp of King Aethelstan's vanguard army before the battle as described in Egil's Saga. Overall we can conclude that Brunanburh has finally been found.
