Research in Interactive Design Xavier Fischer, Daniel Coutellier, 2005-12-31 Research in Interactive Design presents an in-depth study of new product design methods. Interactive design is an original structured design approach that has recently emerged from transversal research. On the research side, the topic of interactive design is the fruitful result of sophisticated joint studies combining specific numerical engineering theories, original development in design science and industrial engineering, new discoveries in mechatronics and advanced mechanical engineering methods. Additionally, industry benefits from interactive design instruments. Interactive design is a constructive approach that tends to ensure innovation by improving user-integration in the design process, fostering the development of virtual prototypes and providing new powerful ways for collaborative design activities. Interactive design instruments are seen as the extension of traditional CAD tools. This book provides an accurate overview of the recent research or industrial application in interactive design. The different arguments, taken from the international conference Virtual Concept 2005, will provide the reader with some advanced solutions concerning new methods and tools by discussing: - modelling techniques: new techniques ensuring the development of high qualified, updated and reduced models being able to represent the behaviour of a process or a product in its environment; - design solution space exploration: specific instruments dedicated to the identification of suitable design solutions and their virtual representation allowing engineers to have interaction with the virtual worlds; - interactive process organization: studies highlighting the basic evolutions of a process integrating new instruments of interactive design. Each subsequent part of the book addresses both advanced techniques and industrial applications of the latest successful research in interactive design. The solutions presented are enhanced by demonstrations of real industrial problem-solving. The different chapters strongly highlight novel solutions for supporting decision-making in a huge field of engineering: product design, manufacturing and assembly, training and risk prevention, Robotics, design for customers, mechanical engineering, etc. In this book, whether a researcher or an industrialist, the reader will find the most recent interactive design techniques and is sure to extract some significant concepts.

Handbook of Driving Simulation for Engineering, Medicine, and Psychology Donald L. Fisher, Matthew Rizzo, Jeffrey Caird, John D. Lee, 2011-04-25 Effective use of driving simulators requires considerable technical and methodological skill along with considerable background knowledge. Acquiring the requisite knowledge and skills can be extraordinarily time consuming, yet there has been no single convenient and comprehensive source of information on the driving simulation research being conducted

Arizona Intelligent Vehicle Research Program Stephen R. Owen,2002 This report documents Phase Two, the third full year of a continuing research program by the Arizona Department of Transportation (ADOT) to study vehicle and infrastructure-based Intelligent Transportation Systems technologies. Phase Two of Arizona's Intelligent Vehicle Research Program focused on the critical 2000-2001 winter season. Phase One of the research project was basically a partnership with California to test the Caltrans-PATH advanced snowplow in Arizona. One defining element of Phase Two was the search for a satisfactory new system that could be acquired by ADOT and installed on one of the State's snowplows for long-term testing. The final result of the search, in early 2001, was that the Arizona Transportation Research Center (ATRC) and the Flagstaff District concluded an agreement to purchase one of the 3M Company's Lane Awareness Systems, as well as five miles of 3M tape to guide the vehicle. The second major new factor in Phase Two of this research was the need for formal, unbiased reporting and analysis of the training and evaluation results for the 3M and Caltrans driver-assistance concepts. The ATRC therefore contracted with Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff to monitor the training and testing, to survey stakeholders, to provide evaluation results, and to make recommendations for the future. The ADOT research also was independently supported by the 3M Company, through their own evaluation program contract with the University of Iowa. Despite their prior lack of mountain road snowplow expertise, U-Iowa's driver surveys were of great benefit to ADOT, the ATRC and the NAU evaluation effort. This project faced a number of unexpected setbacks in the Phase Two winter of 2000-2001. Nevertheless, tests and training proceeded at Flagstaff with both systems. The project team developed creative solutions to many obstacles, and pushed ahead. As a result, a great deal was learned from Phase Two, as Arizona developed the first test program in the West with dedicated real-world high-altitude test sites for both the Caltrans and the 3M systems, only 30 miles apart.

Research Design: Validation of Simulation Technology in the Training, Testing, and Licensing of Tractor-trailer Drivers. Final Report Cathy Emery,1999 The FHWA, Office of Motor Carrier Highway Safety is conducting research to validate the use of low-to mid-cost simulator for commercial driver training, testing and licensing. The primary purpose of the study is to examine how simulator technology, as compared to conventional methods, may facilitate and enhance tractor-trailer driver performance. This report details the proposed research design to conduct the empirical simulator validation study. The research design consists of three distinct parts. Part 1 addresses the forward transfer of training for entry-level drivers. Part 2 is an assessment of the advanced capabilities of the test simulator. Part 3 is a longitudinal study of the drivers that have successfully completed either the truck based or simulator based driver training program and have gone on to earn their Commercial Drivers License. A previous OMCHS report titled, Commercial Motor Vehicle Simulation Technology To Improve Driver Training, Testing and Licensing Methods Final Report - April 1996, evaluated truck driving simulators in the US and Europe. The report indicated that truck driving simulation was sufficiently mature and recommended that FHWA validate this technology. The Digitran SafeDrive 1000 was recommended as the test bed for the follow on validation study. A copy of the report can be obtained by contacting the National Technical Information Service (703-605-6000 or 1-800-553-6847) and referencing NTIS Publication Number PB96-183405, The validation study will commence in FY 1999. It will start with a reassessment of the commercial marketplace to assure the simulator selected as the test bed for the study reflects the most up to date information and best meets the needs of OMCHS--Technical report documentation page
