My Very Own Birthday Robin West,1996 Includes ideas for creative birthday parties, with recipes for special foods and instructions for making invitations, decorations, favors, and more.

Green Monkey Dreams Isobelle Carmody,1996 A stunning collection of 14 short stories, full of provocative ideas and haunting imagesI ride this day upon the Worldroad, alone, except for Courage, who rides on the pommel of my saddle fluffing his feathers. I did not dream of journeying thus as a child . . . This is the unforgettable world of Isobelle Carmody, presented in 14 stories written over a period of 13 years. Within it readers will find roads of paradox on which an angel might be a torturer, or a princess might reject a prince to save a rooster. These are paths traveled by seekers of the difficult deepest truths never found on straight roads; here a boy searches for his true name, a group of pilgrims is led by a song on an ancient journey, and a beast discovers hope. Enter this world and you will never again be sure where reality ends and imagination begins, for sometimes the greatest truths can only be told through imagination. From one of Australia's finest writers of fantasy comes a stunning collection of stories full of provocative ideas and haunting images.

Thoughts of Home Elaine Greene, Elaine Green, 1995 Each of us has a true personal landscape, but some people never find it. I was lucky to find mine when I was a child, & never to lose it, says one author. Riveting, poignant, funny, the essays gathered here in Thoughts of Home all speak of the dreams, the memories - & the sometimes-painful realities - of the personal landscapes we call home. For some, home is defined by a passion for a place. On The Trying-to-Leave-New-Orleans

Blues a young woman makes three vain attempts to achieve escape velocity from the powerful force field of New Orleans, where at lunchtime she will walk down to the Napoleon House bar & cafe, one of the most wistfully beautiful interiors in America...The waiters are languid, understanding men in white button-down shirts with old-fashioned ribbed shirts shoeing through. For others home is the house where they grew up. In the mysterious A Haunted Place a daughter & son decide not to sell the family home after they hear the footsteps of their dead father on the stairs. In The Time-Travel Game a grown woman still returns to a Manhattan park bench in front of her childhood apartment when she needs to reconfirm the past. & as The Grandmother Who Could do Anything makes clear, home is also about people we love. For this author it was a sturdy, down-to-earth woman who could both coolly chop the heads off live chickens & warmly open her arms to her granddaughter. With Grandma holding me, my face against the bib of her apron, I felt invincible, as if nothing could ever hurt me. In Mother's Gifts, an army brat who moved twelve times in her childhood honors her mother's ability to make a home no matter how dispiriting the circumstances. Her weapons were heirlooms, family rituals, & curtains. By my mother's standards...we were not at home until every window was properly dressed. Even the wilder reaches of the natural world can become a home to those looking for a sense of quiet continuity. In Almost Like Hibernation a couple decides to live in a log cabin in the remote Yaak Valley in northwestern Montana, where the big excitement is watching otters play on the ice, or simply waiting for the mail. We used to live in cities, where we felt clumsy, rushed, prone to mistakes...Now, finally, I think we have found our level, somewhere way down near the bottom of things. The essays in Thought of Home provide vivid glimpses into other people's lives, but these stories - no matter how different from our own - always strikes a cord of recognition. Each somehow makes us appreciate our personal histories.

Tom Green Shannon Hawkins, 2000-03-01 "Tom Green is the son I would have chopped off my penis to avoid having." — Mike Bullard, host of Open Mike. Udder Insanity tells the story of Tom Green's life from his early beginnings as the host of the late-night Ottawa radio show Midnight Caller, through his transformation into a Juno-nominated rap artist, to The Tom Green Show's great success on the Canadian Comedy Network, and to his antics in the early 2000s as MTV's renegade prankster, who sets out to taunt and tease a generation of South Park-loving television viewers. Described as the "Master of Mayhem," Tom Green has built an entire career on the vile and the vulgar: munching on a handful of gooey Vaseline-coated human hair, turning his parents' car into the infamous "Slut Mobile" (featuring an airbrushed portrait of an explicit lesbian love scene on the hood), dragging a rotten raccoon corpse on to Open Mike, and getting up-close-and-personal with his bovine friends . . . Tom milks it all wholeheartedly! As Udder Insanity reveals, it seems nothing or no one is above being sucked into the underbelly of Tom's demented and hilarious world.
