

Ir Realism Vs Liberalism

Martin Griffiths

Rethinking International Relations Theory Martin Griffiths, 2011-03-02 International Relations (IR) theory has seen a proliferation of competing, and increasingly trenchant, worldviews with no consensus on how to evaluate their relative strengths and weakness. This innovative new text provides an original interpretation of how best to navigate the clash of perspectives in contemporary IR theory. The book provides a systematic overview of the main worldviews – such as realism, liberalism, and constructivism – and their associated theoretical underpinnings. Placing liberal internationalism at the heart of the debate, it argues that the main division in IR theory is between liberal internationalism and its critics. Griffiths examines both the strengths and weaknesses of liberal internationalism as a worldview, and also explores the competing worldviews that have been generated by the perceived flaws of this perspective. Examination of crucial policy issues is incorporated throughout the text, restoring the relevance of theory for those who wish to understand those policy issues. Moreover, this book revitalises the raison d'être of contemporary IR theory and shows the role it can play in making sense of the twenty-first century.

Philosophical Pragmatism and International Relations Shane J. Ralston, 2013-05-23 What are the implications of philosophical pragmatism for international relations theory and foreign policy practice? According to John Ryder, “a foreign policy built on pragmatist principles is neither naïve nor dangerous. In fact, it is very much what both the U.S. and the world are currently in need of.” Close observers of Barack Obama’s foreign policy statements have also raised the possibility of a distinctly pragmatist approach to international relations. Absent from the three dominant theoretical perspectives in the field—realism, idealism and constructivism—is any mention of pragmatism, except in the very limited, instrumentalist sense of choosing appropriate foreign policy tools to achieve proposed policy objectives. The key commitments of any international relations approach in the pragmatist tradition could include a flexible approach to crafting policy ends, theory integrally related to practice, a concern for both the normative and explanatory dimensions of international relations research, and policy means treated as hypotheses for experimental testing. Following the example of classic pragmatists such as John Dewey and neo-pragmatists like Richard Rorty, international relations scholars and foreign policy practitioners would have to forgo grand theories, instead embracing a situationally-specific approach to understanding and addressing emerging global problems. Unfortunately, commentary on the relationship between philosophical pragmatism and international relations has been limited. The authors in Philosophical Pragmatism and International Relations remedies this lacuna by exploring ways in which philosophical pragmatism, both classic and contemporary, can inform international relations theory and foreign policy practice today.

International Relations Theory for the Twenty-First Century Martin Griffiths, 2007-10-24 Written by an international team of experts in the field, this is the first comprehensive textbook to provide an overview of all the most important theories within international relations.

The "Man" Question in International Relations Marysia Zalewski, Jane Parpart, 2019-04-05 Originally published in 1998, The Man Question in International Relations looks the prevalence of man in the world of international relations. The book argues that, focusing on women as a way of changing the gender of international relations can position women as the problem. The authors of this book suggest that the problem is not woman but man. Rather than highlighting the absences and presence of women in the theories and practices of international relations, the authors concentrate on questioning the practices of masculinities, the hegemony of men, and the subject of man. In this way, they hope to destabilize the field in ways that adding women and stirring has not.

Liberalism and International Relations Theory Andrew Moravcsik, 1992

How does feminist theorising enrich our understanding of IR theory? Magdalena Zettl, 2013-12-30 Essay from the year 2012 in the subject Politics - Region: Other States, grade: 1.8, , language: English, abstract: Realism and liberalism have long been the dominant theories within IR. However, these failed to give a full-fledge explanation about the peaceful end of the Cold War, thereby giving way to more alternative IR views, such as Feminism. The increased use of violence against women as a weapon of war¹, sexual trafficking, military prostitution² as well as women's increasingly important role as peace activists and wives of statesmen (Baylis & Smith, 1997: 174) prove that women do influence politics. This lets Feminist scholars, such as C. Enloe, pose the legitimate question Where were the women in world politics (1990, p. 133). The establishment of the International Feminist Journal of Politics in 1999 (Taylor & Francis Online, 2012) and the UN Resolution 1325 Women, Peace and Security in 2000 (Women for Peace, 2012) seem to prove that Feminism has finally been granted a place in IR. Nevertheless, the relatively low number and the rather aggressive, male-like behaviour of female political actors³ let us question this presumption. After outlining the main strands and concepts of Feminist Theory, the essay highlights feminist critique on traditional IR theory⁴. I, then, explain how Feminism allows for a re-evaluation and expansion of basic IR concepts, thereby enriching IR theory.

Social Constructivism in international relations and the Gender Dimension Ikechukwu Aloysius

Orjinta, 2010-12-21 Seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject Politics - Political Theory and the History of Ideas Journal, grade: Eins, LMU Munich (Geschwister-Scholl Institut für Politische Wissenschaft), course: Social Constructivism in International Rel. Theory, language: English, abstract: The goal of this work is to study the Approach of Social Constructivism in International Relations and to anchor this examination to the emergent debate of Feminist Constructivism as an offshoot of Gender in International Relations. To market International Relations as a social construction is to underscore the importance of Interactions, discourse, change and sociality as opposed to Individuality, autarky, power, materiality, rationality and militarism. In this regard Social Constructivism ushers itself in, in the discipline of International Relations as a new alternative to the traditional theories that have hitherto monopolized the way political scientists have been viewing the inter- and intrastate events. Constructivism is the new approach to International Relations. It takes a middle course between realism and liberalism. Constructivism explores the role of ideas, images, symbols, norms, culture and discourse on social life. It stresses that ideational factors such as dialogue and exchange of ideas are more result-oriented in socio-political life than material factors. Constructivism is a social Theory that centers on social life and social change. Focusing on „social facts“ (Searle 1995) like money, sovereignty and rights which have no material reality but are inter-subjectively made real by shared ideational forces among peoples, Constructivists followed the example of Foucault who opined that discourse is the root of all successes in human and social relations. Encompassing a broad range of theories that tackle the questions of ontology (the science of being), Constructivism insists that actors are shaped by the social environment in which they found themselves. In this way it researches on how identities and interests are created. Just as we have earlier noted, it handles also epistemological enquiries such as the material versus the ideational debate. Distancing itself from Realism, Neo-Realism and other utilitarian and materialist theories, Constructivism is skeptical about most of their claims such as those bordering on historical and scientific accuracy. For no single observation and account is flawless.

The New Permissive Use of Force - A Window for Change in German Foreign Policy? Lutz Lindenau, 2010-08

Master's Thesis from the year 2003 in the subject Politics - International Politics - Topic: German Foreign Policy, grade: 8 (of 10), University of Amsterdam (FMG), 15 entries in the bibliography, language: English, abstract: If we look back at more than a decade of united Germany's foreign policy, there seems to be a shift away from the former military culture of restraint . Throughout the 1990s, German troops have been increasingly deployed in military operations out of area and for the first time since the Second World War participated in combat missions in the Kosovo War in 1999. Consequently, the FRG has read the signs of the new time and feels ready to take on the role of a European power. Has the reunited country actually gained power? Has the removal of the last boundaries of German sovereignty triggered a quest for more political autonomy that manifests itself in an increased military activity? Does this comparatively more permissive use of force indicate a fundamental shift away from former traditional principles of the Bonn Republic? Or does the Berlin Republic head toward a militarized German foreign policy in the context of Euro-Atlantic hegemony? It is Germany's security policy as a cornerstone of foreign policy that I am going to examine between 1990 and 2003 to be able to make some inferences of foreign policy changes. Secondly, by looking of some factors that might have had an impact on these eventual changes one might additionally gain some further implications. The aim of this thesis is therefore twofold: I intend to contribute with this work to the debate whether since reunification change or continuity prevails in German foreign policy, while I additionally attempt a causal analyses of new elements in it. The scope of that debate will be in so far enhanced as it tries to generate causal inferences as well.

A Dominion of Western States? Theoretical Perspectives on International Relations Gideon Asante, 2019-12-18 Essay from the year 2018 in the subject Politics - Region: Western Europe, grade: A, University of Cape Coast, course: Diplomacy, language: English, abstract: The purpose of this paper is to discuss the view that International Relations continue to be the domain of a few powerful Western States. In doing so, the paper is divided into three sections. The first section explains the concept of international relations and the theoretical perspectives of liberalism and realism on international relations. The second section discusses the following; World/Power politics, UN Security Council and the Bretton Wood Institutions to support the view that International Relations is dominated by a few powerful Western States. The final section concludes the essay.

Realism and Liberalism Theory. An Overview of Definition and Similarities Salim Abuto, 2022-12-07 Studienarbeit aus dem Jahr 2022 im Fachbereich Philosophie - Praktische (Ethik, Ästhetik, Kultur, Natur, Recht, ...), , Sprache: Deutsch, Abstract: This paper examines Realism and Liberalism Theory. Plato's statement that only the dead have witnessed the end of battle echoed events at the time. Ancient Greece experienced far too many conflicts, which led some to view war as necessary while others saw it as a threat. Philosophers and theorists have been particularly interested in understanding human nature, its place in social and political life, and ways and means of giving human life purpose from Plato's time to the modern era of political science and international relations thinking. This line of research and thought that brought mankind to its current state had peace at its core. This mental activity has been heavily influenced by theories of peace and conflict.

The focus has shifted to nation-state interactions over the past three centuries, though. Theories have emerged that help us better understand how nations interact, what drives them to conflict, what drives them to seek peace, and how these causes and motives can be manipulated to a point where peace is no longer regarded as a possibility. While theorists have identified them and literature has illuminated them, in some situations the obsession with peace, power struggles, economic muscle, and increasing borders has resulted in a more hostile state of international affairs between nations and peoples.

Feminist International Relations and Wartime Rape. Feminist Writings' Contribution to Women's Rights Gerhild Grabitzer, 2019-09-27 Essay from the year 2019 in the subject Politics - General and Theories of International Politics, grade: 2, Aston University, language: English, abstract: The goal of this essay is to examine feminist contributions to international relations theory in the context of wartime rape. In the first part of this essay, the author will discuss what feminist IR theory can be and what it means in this piece. In order to evaluate feminist contributions, it is necessary to lay out some groundwork. Therefore she will then go on to outline the gendered violence that happened during the Bosnian war and will also explain some of the moral-theory that dominates certain IR theories, because questions of humanity are questions of morals. Concluding this essay, the author take a look at international legislature concerning this topic, seeing how surprisingly enough, it is very close to some schools of IR theory specifically Realism. Before doing so, she will then put feminist IR theory in relation to mainstream IR theory against the background of wartime rape in Bosnia, although she touches upon this throughout this piece.

Disengagement and what After? Shlomo Hasson, 2005

Hedley Bull's idea of "international society" Andreas Michaelis, 2014-05-21 Essay from the year 2013 in the subject Politics - General and Theories of International Politics, grade: 1,5, University of Warwick, language: English, abstract: This October, one major headline filled German newspapers. The American "National Security Agency" (NSA) were hacking the mobile of Bundeskanzler Merkel. The country was outraged. Nobody could understand why the Americans collect information, under the justification of "War against terror", from a declared ally. Do we not live in an international society where friends can trust each other and their acts are defined by morality? Is there maybe an un-spoken rule, that anticipates such behaviour or a conceived common set of beliefs, which appear when two states start an interaction? In this essay I will assess critically Hedley Bull's idea of "international society", which could account for the spy attack by the USA against Germany. Firstly, I will explain the statements of the "English School", which Hedley Bull assigns himself to. After this, I will distinguish it from other International-Relation (IR) theories like Realism and Liberalism. Furthermore I want to interpret the meaning of "international society". I want to show how it is built up (historically), how it is ruled and how this approach solves the problem of anarchy. After that I am going to criticize the idea of the "international system". In the end I will summarize and evaluate if this approach in international relations is valid or not. Before I start I have to give some background information. The term "English School" was coined in the 1970s to describe a group of predominantly British, or British inspired, writers for whom "international society is the primary object of analysis (Linklater et al 2013,88). Hedley Bull, a former professor for IR in Oxford, was one of the most influential early members of the "English School".

Security Perception and China-India Relations Li Li, 2009 Has there been any substantial change in the China-India relations since the end of Cold War? If there has, what is the driving force behind it? And what will characterize this relationship in the future: rivalry, alliance or cooperation? It is exactly these questions that Security Perception and China-India Relations attempt to address. In this book, Li Li, a Chinese scholar, starts her study on China-India relations with a new approach.
