Bearded Dragons Alicia Asselin, 2016-08-29 Bearded Dragons: Wonderful Pictures & Great Facts Book about Bearded Dragons These gentle creatures are popular among pet lovers. They love to lie under the sun during the mornings and sleep throughout the nights. Unlike any other lizards, these animals do not grow their legs or tails back after losing them. Who are these animals that puff their spikes and scales like a beard? Who are these creatures that can only be found in Australia? They are none other than the Pogona Vitticeps or more commonly known as the bearded dragons. The bearded dragons are called bearded because of their spikes and scales that look like a beard. These animals belong to the family of reptiles, or cold-blooded animals. Reptiles are scaly animals that either crawl on their bellies or walk on short legs. Cold-blooded animals could not maintain their body heat, so they rely on other heat sources to keep it up.

Bearded Dragon: Amazing Photos and Fun Facts Book for Kids Kristin Pardo, 2016-02-05 Bearded Dragon: Amazing Photos & Fun Facts Book For Kids A bearded dragon is a kind of lizard. It can grow up to 24 inches, maybe even longer. It varies in color from species to species. Some are so small while others are so large. The bearded dragon used to only live in Australia, but because people wanted to get them as pets, they came to the Americas during the 1990s. However, some say, the bearded dragon wanted to try a new environment and experience life abroad so it traveled to foreign lands. Nowadays, you can find them everywhere. People still like keeping them as pets because they are very calm and friendly.

Children's EBook: The Essential Guide to Bearded Dragons Antonietta Smets, 2017-02-17 Children's eBook: The Essential Guide to Bearded Dragons In the dry places of Australia, there lived these gentle lizards called the bearded dragons. These creatures have spikes and scales all over their bodies. When threatened, the scales on their throats puff, which look like a beard. Thus, they are named bearded dragons. Bearded dragons are also known as Pogona Vitticeps, or simply beardies. They are four-legged animals with triangular heads, flat bodies and tails. Their tails measure half the length of their bodies. Despite being lizards, beardies do not have the ability to re-grow their tails or legs. In fact, they could not make their tails fall off intentionally when they feel at risk. They would rather puff their scales, change their colors or run in the presence of danger.

Bearded Dragons Betty Tremblay, 2017-04-13 Bearded Dragons: Amazing Picture and Facts About Bearded Dragons for kids The bearded dragon or Pogona Vitticeps belong to the family of lizards and normally are between 12 to 24 inches in length from its head to the end of its tail. Bearded dragons are native only to Australia, and are often found in dry woody areas. Its head has a triangular shape and has spikes which look like thorns. On the underside of the head, there are spiked scales that resemble a beard when puffed up, also maybe the reason why they are called such. These scales change in color and become a deep shade when the bearded dragon is breeding. The bearded dragon has four stout legs which it uses to climb trees. It has a flat body which has spikes that run through each side of its stomach. The length of its tail is almost half the length of its body. However, if its tail is cut off, it does not grow back, unlike the ordinary lizard whose tail grows back once cut.

Bearded Dragons Alexandra Jimmy, 2016-08-09 Bearded Dragons: Amazing Pictures & Wonderful Facts Book about Bearded Dragons The bearded dragon has the common name of Pogona. Bearded refers to its physical appearance of having a beard under its throat, which has the ability to change color when it is tensed, when there is a change in temperature, when a possible enemy is spotted, and other scenarios that will get a reaction out of this creature. The bearded dragons are medium-sized lizards that grow up to 2 feet in length (from head to tail). They can be found naturally living in the Australian desert and woodland regions. These dragons could actually make fantastic pets since they can be easily attended to compared to other reptiles. They are not quick to grow big, consume few bits of food, and look pretty groovy. Supplies on taking care of these lizards are more likely cheaper.

Bearded Dragons : a Guide from a Veterinarian on Caring for Your Bearded Dragon How to Make Your Dragon

Live for 12 Years Or More Donald Wilson, 2012-06-01 Bearded dragons make great pets as they love human beings and actually like to be handled by them. These are docile creatures but they can be aggressive if their space is being invaded by another animal. Bearded dragons usually live for ten years, but with the right care, which includes the right temperature, food, and habitat, they have been known to live for longer. Bearded dragons love to eat, but they should never be overfed as this could lead to paralysis in the younger ones who may eventually die. Their diet should include insects, fruits and vegetables as they are omnivorous by nature. They are susceptible to certain diseases such as calcium deficiency, gastrointestinal and fungal infections and should be taken to a Herp veterinarian if you see them displaying the symptoms of these illnesses. Like their other reptile counterparts, the bearded dragon is also prone to bacterial diseases such as salmonella, and as such, when you bathe, touch, handle and clean their cage, you need to ensure that your hands are properly washed both before and after any of these activities. Rubber gloves are highly recommended especially for use when you are cleaning their habitat to avoid the spread of bacteria.

About The Author: Donald Wilson loves all aquatic animals, but reptiles are his favorite. He however has a special love for turtles and bearded dragons. He grew up as an only child but he never craved another sibling due to the fact that he always had animals around him. He always wanted a turtle or a bearded dragon but his parents decided that they were much too busy to spend the time that was needed to care for these animals, and he was too young at one point, and then way too busy himself with both school and athletics by the time he got to the age where he was old enough to look after one. As such, it was not until he was out of college and settled in his career that he decided to get not one, but two turtles; a Red eared Slider and a Painted Turtle and one male and one female bearded dragon. He knows all there is to know about turtles and bearded dragons and enjoys sharing his vast knowledge about them with all those who are interested in learning about these creatures just for their general knowledge but also those who are considering them as pets. He sees his turtles as his lifetime friends as they are among the longest living creatures in existence and although they do take a lot of care, it is completely worth it to him and he loves his friendly little bearded dragons who close their eyes when he rubs their heads.

Bearded Dragon Care Dominic Randall,2023-07-04 The Bearded Dragon, or Pogona for short, is an Australian lizard species. Because of its placid temperament, small size, and visually appealing design, this lizard is a common household pet. The lizard gets its common name, bearded dragon, from the beard-like projections of spiky skin it may raise beneath its chin when it feels threatened or wants to assert its dominance. The appearance of a bearded dragon is one of a kind. Their skin is rough and scaly, and their bodies are relatively flat. Depending on the species and region, they can have a wide range of colours, from muted greys and browns to bright oranges and yellows. They have a triangular skull and a row of spikes down each side and across their back. These reptiles are typically ground-dwellers and are diurnal, meaning they are active throughout the day. They are able to climb and dig because of their robust limbs and pointed claws. Bearded Dragons are omnivores, meaning they eat everything from insects to fruits to vegetables to tiny animals. Bearded Dragons are exotic reptiles that need special attention as pets. They require suitable lighting and nutrition in addition to a large, temperature-gradient container that allows them to maintain a constant body temperature. If handled gently at a young age, they can develop acclimated to humans and are widely believed to be gentle. Note that this is based on what was thought to be true as of September 2021; since then, more information on Bearded Dragons may have come to light.

The Dragon Garden Yair Malino-Goldstein,Kimberly Burnham,2021-03-26 Like people, bearded dragons are omnivores, which means they eat all kinds of things. They eat insects including crickets, cockroaches, and lots of fruit leaves and vegetables. With a little work 25 percent or more of a young, bearded dragon's food can come from a garden. As beardies get older, you can give them more vegetables and fruit leaves, and less insects. Some sources recommend 20 percent insects and 80 percent vegetables for adult dragons.In the Dragon Garden we will focus on eight plants that can help feed your bearded dragon all summer long and throughout the year. The four perennials are grape vines, raspberry bushes, strawberry plants, and asparagus. Four garden annuals planted each year from seeds are kale, arugula, radish greens, and mustard greens. Greens from an organic garden are the best thing for a bearded dragon and can be fun and educational to grow. Variety is the key to a healthy bearded dragon. With a wide range of different kinds of leaves, your bearded dragon will get many needed nutrients. Note that many veterinarians recommend giving bearded dragons only crickets and insects that have been purchased at a store rather than caught in the garden, so focus on growing leaves for your beardie. The fruit produced in the garden is best consumed by children and adults, rather than the dragon. Fruits, like strawberries, raspberries, and grapes, should be given infrequently or not at all to bearded dragons. Many sources recommend adding fruit to the beardie's diet only once or twice a month. In the wild, bearded dragons live as solitary creatures in warm and arid areas of Australia. They favor deserts, subtropical woodlands, savannahs, and scrublands. Since they are omnivores, they eat insects, leaves, flowers, fruit and even small lizards or rodents. Wild bearded dragons also eat tree leaves, including mulberry trees. While much of a bearded dragon's food can come from a garden bed, other food can be picked from nature or picked from other plants that are part of the yard or landscaping. Make sure what you are picking for the dragon has not been sprayed with pesticides. Wildcrafting is the art of harvesting food that you have not planted in a garden, specifically for picking. If you look around your house at the trees and flowers, there may be some leaves you can wildcraft for your dragon. Dragon food also grows as weeds like dandelions and on trees like maple leaves.

The Bearded Dragon Steve Grenard, 1999-03-26 The Bearded Dragon, also known as the Lizard of Oz, is an enormously popular pet from down under. It is estimated that in 1998, 100,000 Bearded Dragons will be purchased by reptile enthusiasts in the United States. A docile animal, Bearded dragons are relatively easy to keep in captivity—but they do need special care—all of which will be included in this excellent source for the beginning Bearded Dragon fan.

Kids Books Andreina Carlone, 2019-10-21 Kids Books: Amazing Pictures & Fun Facts on Animals in Nature about Bearded dragons for Kids Hi kids! My name is Abe. I am a bearded dragon. I am not the kind that flies and breathes fire. I am just a humble lizard. I belong to a clan of reptiles called Pogona. There are nine species in our clan. Humans affectionately call us beardies. What makes beardies unique from other lizards are the spiny scales that grow under our throats. We can scare off a bigger animal by inflating our throats, which suddenly turn black. This makes us look like we are wearing a prickly beard. We may not be as awesome as our winged fictional namesakes, but we are good climbers. We spend much of our time on branches and bushes. But my favorite thing to do, especially in the mornings, is to lie around on rocks. Some of my more adventurous friends love to hang around in people's gardens or near people's houses, and for that reason they are called perching beardies.
