Design for Sustainability Vicky Lofthouse, Professor Tracy Bhamra, 2012-09-28 Design for Sustainability is a practical approach to design which focuses on the challenges and issues faced by those designing consumer products in the 21st Century. It is written from a design perspective and aimed at both professional and student industrial and product designers, and those involved in managing design. The book begins by summarising the historical and current issues of the environmental debate in the context of sustainable product development, highlighting the benefits gained from considering the impact on the environment and issues of sustainability when designing. The authors answer the questions: What is sustainable product development and why is it important? What are the main drivers of sustainable product development? They explain how design can help to control human impact on the environment by not only minimising pollution, waste, energy use and use of scarce resources, but also by thinking outside the box to create systems and services that can reduce the number of products manufactured. The aim is to put sustainable development within a commercial context and introduce a new focus for design. Design for Sustainability outlines and assesses the methods, tools and techniques available to designers, both for design innovation and design improvement. A wide range of case studies are presented across a number of product sectors including electrical goods, IT and furniture. Initially they demonstrate product improvement and redesign, examples include those that reduce waste, pollution and energy consumption, designing for recycling and reuse of parts. Further examples are then provided exemplifying the more radical approach of system and service design. The final section takes the reader through a whole sustainable design project from start to finish, from brief to manufacture. References and sources of information are also included.

The New Zealand Oxford Dictionary contains over

100,000 definitions, including over 12,000 New Zealand entries and a wide range of encyclopedic information which provide information about the world, especially its notable persons and places. Also included are a series of Appendices which provide historical, geographical and other information, as well as sections on grammar and punctuation. The Appendices also include both the English and Maori versions of the Treaty of Waitangi and the national anthem, God Defend New Zealand.

Featherston Geoff Isaac, 2017-07-27 Grant Featherston (1922-1995) was a Melbourne based industrial designer, most well-known for his Contour series of chairs. Contours were designed and developed in the early 1950s and remain highly sought after by mid-century collectors in Australia and overseas, often fetching $10,000 or more. Featherston, later joined by his wife Mary, in fact produced hundreds of chairs, just part of an astonishingly diverse output from this Australian design partnership that has gone largely uncelebrated until now. This is the first book to celebrate the life and work of Grant Featherston and focuses on the chairs produced from 1947-1975 and presents a new biography of the designer, drawn from archival research and interviews with his peers. The 70,000 word text chronologically follows the design output. The book is extensively illustrated with over 250 beautiful photographs, including a selection from the previously unpublished personal achieve of Ian Howard (the former Managing Director of Aristoc). In 1957, Featherston was appointed chief design consultant for Melbourne based manufacturer Aristoc and spent the next thirteen years designing scores of chairs. Some models were so successful that it is highly likely that nearly all Australians have sat on at least one Featherston chair in their lives. Robin Day is probably the only other mid-century designer to achieve this level of commercial success. The Featherstons were selected by Robin Boyd to design and produce the highly successful Talking chair for the Australian Pavilion at the 1967 World Expo in Montreal. In the mid-1970s the international design community was searching for production techniques that would allow chairs to be produced as a single component, requiring little effort to upholster and minimal protection for transportation. In 1973, the Featherstons' career in chair design culminated with the release of the Numero IV, the largest single-shot injection moulded chair produced anywhere in the world. Featherston's real genius lay in his ability to develop production techniques that allowed the tiny, remote Australian market to experience the Modern look. The ingenuity required to succeed and consistently deliver successful Australian modern designs, is the real, previously untold, story revealed in this book.
