Collecting Prints and Drawings Sylvia Heudecker,Andrea M. Gáldy,2019-01-22 Cabinets of prints and drawings are found in the earliest art collections of Early Modern Europe. From the sixteenth century onwards, some of them acquired such fame that the necessity for an ordered and scientific display meant that a dedicated keeper was occasionally employed to ensure that fellow enthusiasts, as well as visiting diplomats, courtiers and artists, might have access to the print room. Often collected and displayed together with drawings, the prints formed a substantial part of princely collections which sometimes achieved astounding longevity as a specialised group of collectibles, such as the Florentine Gabinetto Disegni e Stampe at the Uffizi (GDSU). Prints and drawings, both bought and commissioned, were collected by princes and by private amateurs. Like the rest of their collections, the prints and drawings were usually preserved and displayed as part of, or near, the owner's library in close proximity to scientific instruments, cut gems or small sculptural works of art. Both prints and drawings not only documented an encyclopaedic approach to the knowledge available at the time, but also depicted parts of the collections in the form of a paper museum. Prints and drawings also served as a guide to the collections. They spread their fame, and the renown of their owners, across Europe and into new worlds of collecting, both East and West. This volume explores issues such as: when, how and why did cabinets of prints and drawings become a specialised part of princely and private collections? How important were collections of prints and drawings for the self-representation of a prince or connoisseur among specialists and social peers? Is the presentation of a picture hanging in a gallery, for example by Charles Eisen for the Royal Galleries at Dresden, to be treated as documentary evidence? Are there notable differences in the approach to collecting, presentation and preservation of prints and drawings in diverse parts of the world? What was the afterlife of such collections up to the present day?

Algebraic and Strong Splittings of Extensions of Banach Algebras William G. Bade, Harold G. Dales, Zinaida Alexandrovna Lykova, 1999 In this volume, the authors address the following: Let A be a Banach algebra, and let $\sum_{i=1}^{\infty} A_i \rightarrow A$ be an extension of A , where A_i is a Banach algebra and I is a closed ideal in A . The extension splits algebraically (respectively, splits strongly) if there is a homomorphism (respectively, continuous homomorphism) $\theta: A \rightarrow A$ such that $\pi \circ \theta$ is the identity on A . Consider first for which Banach algebras A it is true that every extension of A in a particular class of extensions splits, either algebraically or strongly, and second for which Banach algebras it is true that every extension of A in a particular class which splits algebraically also splits strongly. These questions are closely related to the question when the algebra A has a (strong) Wedderburn decomposition. The main technique for resolving these questions involves the Banach cohomology group $H^2(A, E)$ for a Banach A -bimodule E , and related cohomology groups. Later chapters are particularly concerned with the case where the ideal I is finite-dimensional. Results are obtained for many of the standard Banach algebras A .

Short-Time Geometry of Random Heat Kernels Richard Bucher Sowers, 1998 This volume studies the behaviour of a random heat kernel associated with a stochastic partial differential equation, and gives short-time expansion of this heat kernel. The author finds that the dominant exponential term is classical and depends only on the Riemannian distance function. The second exponential term is a work term and also has classical meaning. There is also a third non-negligible exponential term which blows up. The author finds an expression for this third exponential term which involves a random translation of the index form and the equations of Jacobi fields. In the process, he develops a method to approximate the heat kernel to any arbitrary degree of precision.
