Geriatric depression scale (GDS) Javaid I. Sheikh, Jerome A. Yesavage, 1986

Implementation of the Geriatric Depression Scale in a Clinic Henrietta Okpala, 2017 Background Depression is a serious public health concern across the lifespan especially in the elderly. Depression is a chronic condition, often with poor outcomes and high costs. Older people are at great risk of being depressed due to their predisposition to chronic health problems (CDC, 2015). Collaboration between primary care physicians (PCP) and psychiatrists in detecting elder depression is crucial. The American Psychiatric Association Practice Guidelines for the Treatment of Patients With Major Depressive Disorder; 3rd edition (2010), provide information for PCP's regarding screening for depression among the elderly that present to the medical clinic. Five to ten percent of the elderly adults over sixty-five years in primary care suffer from depression (CDC, 2015). This figure includes between 10 to 20 percent of those who already have chronic medical conditions. The purpose of this project is to provide useful information about the Geriatric Depression Scale (Sheik & Yesavage, 1986) and educate medical practitioners at a medical clinic, so that they will adopt the scale in their assessment and diagnosis of elderly patients with depression. In 2011 alone, there was an increase from 51% to 64% of depressed patients seen in primary care. Elder suicide carries with it multiple risks such as physical illness, inability to function in daily life, fear of becoming burden, and social isolation. These risks underscore the importance of medical providers making early diagnosis of elder depression with an effective tool. Rosswurm and Larrabee's (1999) Model of Evidence-Based Practice was used as the theoretical guide for this project. Methods included identifying the need for accurate and timely depression assessment of elderly patients in a clinical setting. Outcomes included the incorporation of the GDS tool in the overall assessment of elder patients in the clinic where the project was conducted. Findings indicated that of the fifty elderly assessed with the GDS during this project, 12 (24%) met requirements for a diagnosis of depression, which had been previously overlooked. In other words, these patients' depression was not originally detected in their original general assessment. With early assessment for depression, the elderly can achieve a better quality of life and avoid the overall worsening of any comorbid illness due to an undetected and therefore untreated depression. This author concluded that all three objective of the study were met; namely, a) education and increased knowledge of participants about elder depression and its consequences; b) use of the General Depression Scale (GDS) to assess a sample of 50 elders for depression in the project clinic; and, c) adoption of the GDS by the project medical director as the elder depression assessment going forward.

Karel, Suzanne Ogland-hand, Margaret Gatz, Jürgen Unützer, 2002-03-07 Not only is depression among the elderly treatable but, given its increase in incidence and a rapidly aging population, it is a critical issue for the mental-health and medical communities. The authors review the range of late-life depressive syndromes and the strategies for assessing and treating them, and illustrate the problems and principles with fourteen extended case studies-rare in the geropsychology literature and the core of the book. They also provide a guide to medications, screening tools, innovative models, and supplementary resources, invaluable tools for mental-health professionals and medical practitioners alike.

Kumar, 2011-01-04 The renowned Principles and Practice of Geriatric Psychiatry, now in its third edition, addresses the social and biological concepts of geriatric mental health from an international perspective. Featuring contributions by distinguished authors from around the world, the book offers a distinctive angle on issues in this continually developing discipline. Principles and Practice of Geriatric Psychiatry provides a comprehensive review of: geriatric psychiatry spanning both psychiatric and non-psychiatric disorders scientific advances in service development specific clinical dilemmas New chapters on: genetics of aging somatoform disorders epidemiology of substance abuse somatoform disorders care of the dying patient Continuing the practice of earlier editions, the major sections of the book address aging, diagnosis and assessment and clinical conditions, incorporating an engaging discussion on substance abuse and schizophrenic disorders. Shorter sections include the presentation of mental illness in elderly people from different cultures—one of the most popular sections in previous editions. Learning and behavioural studies, as well as models of geriatric psychiatry practice, are covered extensively. This book provides a detailed overview of the entire range of mental illness in old age, presented within an accessible format. Principles and Practice of Geriatric Psychiatry is an essential read for psychiatrists, geriatricians, neurologists and psychologists. It is of particular use for instructors of general psychiatry programs and their residents.

Implementation of the Geriatric Depression Scale in Hospice Care Alexis Brewer, 2020 Background: Depression in hospice care is undertreated and misunderstood. The geriatric population have health concerns that increase the likelihood of depression and they are more susceptible to complications that are both pharmacological and non-pharmacological. Early intervention by an interdisciplinary team can reduce feelings of helplessness and improve quality of life in the final months of life. Foreground: The state of Utah has the highest percentage of geriatric patients enrolled in the hospice benefit provided by Medicare. It is a Medicare requirement to incorporate interdisciplinary care to treat the whole person instead of the disease process. The incidence of depression can be more proactively treated through medications, counseling, spiritual care, volunteer support, assistance with activities of daily living care, music therapy, and management of other symptoms the patient is burdened with that contribute to feelings of depression. EBP Framework: Evidence-Based Practice and interprofessional teamwork have the highest chance of treating depression in the geriatric hospice population. Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs was utilized in the project along with The Johns Hopkins 18-step Nursing Model. Methods: This project was designed to increase awareness, incorporate all disciplines for multidimensional care, and treat depression through regular assessment and intervention. This project used an educational approach to influence employee education and awareness on the topic of geriatric depression. The project implemented the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS-15) in addition to the current Edmonton Symptom Assessment System. Use of the scale directs care to the proper interventions the patients need in order to report decreased levels of depression upon re-evaluation. Findings/Results: The educational intervention along with the use of GDS-15 scale had positive results in increasing awareness of the patients' level of depression.

Implementation of the scale has encouraged the team to work together to treat the depressive signs and symptoms and has increased communication in care plans established for each patient. Conclusion/Recommendations: The project outcomes for this system's change project include increased care for the patients with a positive GDS-15 scale, increased interdisciplinary team cohesion and teamwork, and increased use of depression care plans to chart patient needs and increase the team approach.

web problem 1 a gas is initially contained inside an insulated container a at initial conditions  $p_1$   $v_1$   $m$  and  $t_1$  these quantities represent pressure volume mass and temperature respectively a valve is then opened which allows the gas to expand freely into an insulated container b which is initially empty web question 1 what is true of isothermal process a  $\Delta t = 0$  b  $\Delta u = 0$  c  $\Delta q = \Delta w$  d  $p$   $v$  constants solution in an isothermal process temperature remains constant  $\Delta t = 0$  since internal energy depends on the temperature  $\Delta u = 0$  from first law of thermodynamics  $\Delta u = \Delta q + \Delta w$  since  $\Delta u = 0$   $\Delta q = -\Delta w$  also  $p$   $v$  nrt as  $t$  is constant  $p$   $v$
