Halfway to the Grave Jeaniene Frost, 2009-10-13 Meet the vampire world's supercouple Cat and Bones in this special 10th anniversary edition, with a director's cut collection of deleted scenes! Cat and Bones are combustible together. - Charlaine Harris Half-vampire Catherine Crawfield is going after the undead with a vengeance, hoping that one of these deadbeats is her father—the one responsible for ruining her mother's life. Then she's captured by Bones, a vampire bounty hunter, and is forced into an unholy partnership. In exchange for finding her father, Cat agrees to train with the sexy night stalker until her battle reflexes are as sharp as his fangs. She's amazed she doesn't end up as his dinner—are there actually good vampires? Pretty soon Bones will have her convinced that being half-dead doesn't have to be all bad. But before she can enjoy her newfound status as kick-ass demon hunter, Cat and Bones are pursued by a group of killers. Now Cat will have to choose a side . . . and Bones is turning out to be as tempting as any man with a heartbeat.

Listening to the Voices, a Qualitative Study to Examine the Attitudes of Women Related to the Routine Use of Ultrasonography in Pregnancy, 1908 The routine use and growing dependence on sophisticated technology has continued to foster a medicalized approach to childbirth. Sonography or ultrasound is one of the most utilized forms of modern reproductive technology. When applied in obstetrics for specific clinical concerns, sonography provides valuable diagnostic information, however, there is limited evidence to support improved outcomes from the use of this technology as a routine prenatal screening test. The purpose of this study was to ask pregnant women about their attitudes toward prenatal sonography. A convenience sample of 20 women, who had undergone a prenatal scan, participated in a tape-recorded interview. Using a qualitative research method, guided by a feminist framework, five themes emerged from analysis of the narratives. These themes were: (a) In Anticipation; (b) The Imaging Experience; (c) The Importance of Knowing; (d) The Next Time; and (e) The Ethics of It All. Key findings of this study suggest women: (a) want prenatal sonography; (b) are fostered to believe there is a need for this type of testing; (c) feel a prenatal scan will provide reassurance about the progress of their pregnancy; (d) feel an ultrasound is a routine prenatal test; (e) do not view sonography as a method of prenatal diagnosis; (f) want information on prenatal sonography to read prior to a scan; and (g) believe ultrasound to be safe technology. These findings are felt to result from the conceptualization of need, routinization of testing and the therapeutic imperative, all of which contribute further to the medicalization of childbirth. Implications for health care practice and recommendations for further research have been suggested on the basis of these findings. Hopefully, this information may assist policy makers in designing women sensitive health care practice.

The Southwest Necropolis of Satricum Marijke Gnade,E. J. M. van Berkel,1992 This book is the final report of the rescue excavations, which took place from 1989 to 1986 in the Southwest Necropolis of Satricum (Borgo Le Ferriere, Latium), well known in antiquity for its sanctuary of the Latin goddess Mater Matuta. They were carried out as a part of the Satricum Research Project, which started in 1977 under the auspices of the Dutch Institute in Rome. The Southwest Necropolis has been attribute to the Volscians, an indigenous people of central Italy who, according to Livy, captured Sactricum in 488 B.C. Presumably, they stayed there until 346 B.C. The non-Latian character of the necropolis seems to be confirmed by archaeological evidence like the remarkable burial gift of a miniature lead axe-head with an inscription in an indigenous dialect. Other evidence for the Volcian identification includes the intramural location of the graves, some of the pottery shapes, and the regular presence of grave goods. So far, the Southwest Necropolis is the only known cemetery in Latium from this period in which the graves regularly contain burial gifts. More than 200 trench graves have been documented, 167 of which have been completely excavated. Inhumation is the only recorded form of burial in most of cases in rectangular wooden coffins.
