Louis Francis Ruffolo

Trail Making Test Ralph M. Reitan, 1979

A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests Otfried Spreen, Esther Strauss, 1998-02-19 In a survey of neuropsychologists published in The Clinical Neuropsychologist, the first edition of the Compendium was named as one of the eleven essential books in their field. This second edition has been thoroughly updated to cover new developments in neuroscience, cognitive psychology, and psychological assessment. It includes new chapters on test selection, report writing and informing the client, executive functions, occupational interest and aptitude, and the assessment of functional complaints. In addition to updating research findings about the tests covered in the first edition, the book now contains almost twice as many tests.

A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests Esther Strauss, Elisabeth M. S. Sherman, Otfried Spreen, 2006 This compendium gives an overview of the essential aspects of neuropsychological assessment practice. It is also a source of critical reviews of major neuropsychological assessment tools for the use of the practicing clinician.

Development of a Non-manual Version of the Trail Making Test Shruti P. Rane,2010

Practice Effects on Trail Making Tasks During Assessment of Dementia Joseph P. Haughey,2016 There has been little research conducted regarding practice effects and trail making tests when similar measures are provided in the same testing session, although practice effects have been observed on Trail Making Test B when it is administered several times, ranging from a week to several months (Bornstein, Baker & Douglas, 1987; Brooks, Weaver, & Scialfa, 2006). This retrospective data analysis study compared Trail Making B performance between one group of patients that were administered only Trail Making B and a second group of patients that were administered The Montreal Test of Cognitive Status (MoCA) prior to Trail Making B. A total of 55 archived cases were selected from two different private practices based upon inclusionary and exclusionary criteria. After completing a one-way MANOVA, the differences between the two groups were not statistically significant. However, results did show that those who were administered the MoCA prior to Trails B completed Trails B in less time (19 seconds) than the individuals who were not administered the MoCA and made fewer errors. Insufficient power and variability in scores may have resulted in Type II error. While no statistically significant results were found, this study still addresses important topics in neuropsychological assessment about the validity and interpretation of test data. Clinicians should be aware of potential practice effects and should avoid using similar tests within the same test battery to enable more accurate diagnoses and recommendations.
