Thrill a college student or school pupil at the beginning of the school year, spoil your sweetheart with a motivational gift at Christmas, or surprise your best friend with an original birthday gift. HOW TO USE Each daily entry consists of two parts: Giving gratitude Tasks to be completed Gratitude Gratitude is such a powerful emotion. Being grateful can make your life better in so many ways. It's rather difficult to feel depressed or sorry for yourself when you are feeling gratitude. So why write? When you write down what are you grateful for, you not only count your blessings, you also affirm that thought inside you. Write down at least 3 things are you grateful for in each entry. It can be anything from your spouse, the air you are breathing, or even just how lucky you are to be on Earth! You can write down less than this number, but no more than six items. - After writing out the five or six items of most importance, rearrange them or mark them in order of how truly important they are. - You begin by completing the task of most importance and refuse to move onto any other item until that one is completed. - Once the first task is done, you continue to move down the prioritized list. - If at the end of the day, you find you have any items that you were unable to complete, the move them onto the list for the following day. Continue to make these lists at the end of each workday, so that they are ready for you at the beginning of the following day.

The Axe Forgets What The Tree Remembers Zoe Bell-Kanapaux,2023-03-03 The story follows Angela Bellfino as she tries to repair her broken relationship with her mother. A complicated past made it difficult for Angela to forgive her mother, even after she is diagnosed with cancer. She finds that the five stages of grief don't really seem to cover any of the ugly feelings that she has. Going from one extreme to the other (seething hatred to the need to push the self destruct button) places Angela and everyone around her on a tightrope that continues to wobble. She is left to wonder if she can forgive her mother for the things that she claims never happened, or if she can even navigate in a world without her mother.
