Field Manual FM 1-0 Human Resources Support April 2014 United States Army,2015-08-23 This publication, Field Manual FM 1-0 Human Resources Support April 2014, provides the fundamentals, principles, and concepts of Army human resources (HR) support doctrine. It provides the doctrinal bases for developing operational plans (OPLANS) and standard operating procedures (SOPs) that support national objectives that reinforce the Army's vision that Soldiers and readiness are the principle focus of HR support. This publication applies to the range of military operations and supports Army doctrine publication (ADP) 3-0, Unified Land Operations and ADP 4-0, Sustainment. The principle audience for FM 1-0 is all members of the profession of arms. Commanders and staffs of Army headquarters serving as joint task force or multinational headquarters should also refer to applicable joint or multinational doctrine concerning the range of military operations and joint or multinational forces. Trainers and educators throughout the Army will also use this manual. Field manual (FM) 1-0, Human Resources Support, is the second revision of this publication. FM 1-0 provides human resources professionals and commanders an understanding of how human resources support contributes to current and future operations and how human resources professionals, organizations, and systems play an increasingly critical role in support of the total force. This manual provides basic doctrinal discussion on the organization and operations of human resources entities within the Army, as well as standard requirements code (SRC) -12, Adjutant General Corps, organizations. FM 1-0 makes numerous changes from the first version. The most significant is the elimination of all the appendices included in the previous version. This information has been modified and embedded throughout the publication which has increased by two chapters from the first version. FM 1-0 contains eight chapters. Chapter 1 discusses human resources support at the tactical, operational, and strategic levels, in the context of HR objectives, enduring principles, and focus of HR support. The chapter also more clearly articulates the role of the Adjutant than previously published. Chapter 2 provides an overview of HR organizations and staff elements, including SRC-12 organizations. This chapter provides recommendations for home station employment of the aforementioned organizations, while also discussing HR rear detachment responsibilities previously addressed in appendix A. Chapter 3 through 6 discuss the four HR core competencies of man the force, provide HR services, coordinate personnel support, and conduct HR planning and operations. A section covering HR automations support is now included in chapter 3, detailing the many HR enabling systems. Additionally, chapter 5 further defines command interest programs and program oversight responsibilities. Chapter 7 was formerly appendix B. This chapter discusses theater opening operations and redeployment operations. Chapter 8 was formerly appendix D. This chapter covers civilian support to include contractor support. FM 1-0 was developed in close coordination with the United States Army Combined Arms Support Command and input taken throughout the Army human resources community.

FY04-11 Civilian Human Resources Strategic Plan United States. Army, 2004

Civilian Workforce Planning in the Department of Defense Susan M. Gates, Christine Eibner, Edward Geoffrey Keating, 2006 In response to more than a decade of downsizing and restructuring, the Department of Defense (DoD) is engaged in a human-resources strategic planning effort to address resulting imbalances in both skills and experience levels in many parts of DoD. The current human-resources strategic plan addresses the need to provide management systems and tools to support total workforce planning and informed decisionmaking (U.S. Department of Defense, 2003b). Attention to Department-wide civilian workforce planning stems in part from the President's Management Agenda of 2001 and the continuing assessments of Department-level progress on workforce planning. DoD civilian workforce-planning efforts are complicated and, at the same time, made more important by the implementation of the National Security Personnel System (NSPS), slated to begin in 2006. The NSPS will replace the traditional federal civil service personnel management system within DoD, providing DoD managers with more management flexibility.

Civilian Personnel Administration in the Army Ann M. McFadden, 1993 The magnitude of the cuts facing the Army's civilian work force, of which the civilian personnel community will take its share, requires an organized and deliberate approach to analyzing, validating and revising its current mission and functions. The issues that the policy makers and the operating personnel specialists face are multi-dimensional. They must continue to deliver services within the current complexity of legal and regulatory restraints, often Federally imposed, while attempting to analyze their work processes in order to streamline them to accommodate budget and manpower reductions. To help the Army meet the challenges of this turbulent environment and minimize the impact of change on the civilian personnel administration community, this paper suggests that the Army leadership implement a strategic planning process. It also provides a functional analysis of the current Army civilian personnel administration program and compares it to private sector human resource programs. This comparison provides options for program enhancements that the Army leadership should consider in its deliberations for modernizing the Civilian Personnel Administration system.

The Strategic Partnership Between Commanders and Civilian Human Resource Leaders in Department of Army Jeannie A. Davis,2001 Leading human resource (HR) professionals in private industry have recently recognized the advantage that HR leaders bring when they become Strategic Partners with business executives. They believe this Strategic Partner role is necessary because of the speed and extent of change challenging business today. Studies published by several government review offices assert that it is also time for government HR leaders to become strategic partners with commanders. The current Army civilian HR (CHR) community is emerging from ten years of turbulence caused by downsizing and restructuring. CHR leaders are exploring new roles and learning new skills. The current CHR system is held hostage in outdated rules and guidance, limiting the range of options available for an HR leader to use in designing strategies that fit mission strategies. In spite of these obstacles, partnerships between commanders and CHR leaders can exist. Army can and should take specific actions soon, to ensure that Army's CHR professionals become skilled in strategic thinking, credible, technically sound, and committed - in order to design and execute strategies supporting the commander and enhancing mission accomplishment.

RAND Arroyo Center produced competency models and a training framework to support Army Human Resources Command's delivery of services after its upcoming reorganization and relocation. Researchers developed competency models for jobs that would survive the move. They identified gaps between the competencies HRC would need and the availability of workers. Finally, they developed training concepts to close gaps between current and future workforces.

The Downsized Warrior David McCormick,1998-02 A former Army officer and Gulf War veteran takes a critical look at the adverse effects of downsizing on the U.S. Army. Though executed with compassion and precision, downsizing undermines morale and threatens the Army at its core. David McCormick demonstrates how the Army's experience in downsizing is instructive for all organizations--government, corporate, and nonprofit alike.
