The Literature of Love Mary Ward, 2009-05-14 Critical introductions to a range of literary topics and genres. The Literature of Love is designed to introduce students to one of the central themes in literature. Focusing first on different types and aspects of love - physical, emotional, spiritual - it then offers a chronological coverage, aiming to illustrate ways in which attitudes to the representation of love in literature have evolved from Chaucer to the present time. Other sections of the book examine particular genres such as the love sonnet, the love letter and 'romantic' fiction; and the differing reception of this literature over time is also considered. The book includes extracts from a range of authors.

On Romantic Love Berit Brogaard, 2015 Romantic love presents some of life's most challenging questions. Can we choose who to love? Is romantic love rational? Can we love more than one person at a time? And can we make ourselves fall out of love? In On Romantic Love, Berit Brogaard attempts to get to the bottom of love's many contradictions. This short book, informed by both historical and cutting edge philosophy, psychology, and neuroscience, combines a new theory of romantic love with entertaining anecdotes from real life and accessible explanations of the neuroscience underlying our wildest passions. Against the grain, Brogaard argues that love is an emotion; that it can be, at turns, both rational and irrational; and that it can be manifested in degrees. We can love one person more than another and we can love a person a little or a lot or not at all. And love isn't even always something we consciously feel. However, love -- like other emotions, both conscious and not -- is subject to rational control, and falling in or out of it can be a deliberate choice. This engaging and innovative look at a universal topic, featuring original line drawings by illustrator Gareth Southwell, illuminates the processes behind heartbreak, obsession, jealousy, attachment, and more.

The Nature of Love, Volume 2 Irving Singer, 2009-02-20 An examination of ideas and ideals of medieval courtly love and the transition into later Romantic love, analyzing the work of Dante, Shakespeare, and Schopenhauer, among many others. Review), monumental (Boston Globe), one of the major works of philosophy in our century (Nous), wise and magisterial (Times Literary Supplement), and a masterpiece of critical thinking [that] is a timely, eloquent, and scrupulous account of what, after all, still makes the world go round (Christian Science Monitor). In the second volume, Singer studies the ideas and ideals of medieval courtly love and nineteenth-century Romantic love, as well as the transition between these two perspectives. According to the traditions of courtly love in the twelfth century and thereafter, not only God but also human beings in themselves are capable of authentic love. The pursuit of love between man and woman was seen as a splendid ideal that ennobles both the lover and the beloved. It was something more than libidinal sexuality and involved sophisticated and highly refined courtliness that emulated religious love in its ability to create a holy union between the participants. Adherents to Romantic love in later centuries, affirmed the capacity of love to effect a merging between two people who thus became one. Singer analyzes the transition from courtly to Romantic by reference to the writings of many artists beginning with Dante and ending with Richard Wagner, as well as Neoplatonist philosophers of the Italian Renaissance, Descartes, Spinoza, Rousseau, Hume, Kant, Hegel, and Schopenhauer. In relation to romanticism itself, he distinguishes between two aspects—benign romanticism and Romantic pessimism—that took on renewed importance in the twentieth century.

In The Name of Love Aaron Ben-Ze'ev, Ruhama Goussinsky, 2008-02-21 We yearn to experience the idealized love depicted in so many novels, movies, poems, and popular songs. Ironically, it is the idealization of love that arms it with its destructive power. Popular media consistently remind us that love is all we need, but statistics concerning the rate of depression and suicides after divorce or romantic break up remind us what might have happened if all that we need is taken away. This book is about our ideals of love, our experiences, of love, the actual disparity between the two, and the manners of coping with this disparity. A major study case of the book concerns men who have murdered their wives or partners allegedly 'out of love'. It is estimated that over 30% of all female murder victims in the United States die at the hands of a former or present spouse or boyfriend. How can murdering a loved one be associated with the assumed moral and altruistic love? Not only is love intrinsically ambivalent, but it can also give rise to dangerous consequences. Some of the worst evils have been committed in the name of love (as in the name of God). A unique collaboration between a leading philosopher in the field of emotions and a social scientist, In the Name of Love presents fascinating insights into romantic love and its future in modern society.

The Pain of Love Revised Version Kebaneilwe Garebatho,2010-06-20 This was written in response to the escalating numbers of people untimely ending their partner's lives and then committing suicide in Botswana, Africa. This is commonly known as passion killings. This book truly reflects things which are happening to people in Botswana, Africa. Botswana is one of the countries having the highest rate of passion killings in the world. Information gathered here is from some of the perpetrators who murdered their partners and attempted suicide. Some of them contributed after realizing that what they had done was a horrible deed. Thinking that their loved ones were dead, they decided to end their lives. These individuals never succeeded, they were caught before they died. Some of the people interviewed were depressed because of relationships that turned sour. It is worth noting that some individuals who had a say in this issue were so heartbroken that they ended up in Lobatse Mental Hospital now called SOBRANO, a local referral psychiatrist hospital in Botswana. The author also visited some courtrooms when murder and attempted suicide cases were in session. He got the facts and details when the cases were in session. He also consulted those awaiting trial. Not only that, he also paid a visit to social workers and psychologists in Gaborone so as to get the whole picture on what is discussed in this book. Some lecturers from the University of Botswana were consulted as well. During the interviews, the author discovered that there are five things which keep a relationship running smoothly and if one or more of the five is\are missing or lacking, trouble is bound to be there. The five things are: 1. MONEY. If money is not there, conflict is bound to be there. And if money is there and one of the two is misusing it, trouble is also bound to be there. Or if money is there and the two cannot agree on how to use it, conflict is also bound to be there. As money is physical as well as spiritual, when other people are having money, they become untouchable and can't cooperate nor listen to their partners until they are broke. 2. FOOD: As majority of the people in the country are poor, once someone has bought food thinking that the food is going to sustain the whole month, once it gets finished before the expected time when the one who bought it is told that it is finished, the person starts to complain or get angry. 3. SEX: If one is denied that sexual encounter, the person spends endless days angry and is irritated by anything. He\she can't cooperate with the partner as a sexually hungry person is a very angry person. He\she can end up looking for it elsewhere. 4. ACCOMMODATION: Suppose the two are not staying in the same house but in different locations, one of the two or both can end up being influenced by the environment one or they are living in to end up doing something which might end up hurting one another. 5. GOOD COMMUNICATION AND RESPECT: This involves lack of forgiveness, failure to listen to each other and perfect flow of information which can enable one to know what the other one is doing or thinking. Lack of respect and taking time without talking to one another also do contribute. In conclusion what is written here was well thought and a lot of research was conducted before this book was written. Prior to writing this book, the author experienced two unfortunate situations which prompted him to write it. The first incident was when he caught his long time fiancé of nine years in bed having sex with another man in his house, bed, bedroom, blankets and using his [the author's] condoms. The two ran away for good till now. The author went to the pub to buy fifteen [15] bottles of alcohol, Push Kin. He drank part of the alcohol and collapsed on the fourth day. His neighbor took him to Princess Marina Hospital, Gaborone, Botswana where he was admitted for fifteen days after being diagnosed with liver problem. The second incident is reflected on the outer cover of this book where he caught his best friend in bed with his partner after his best friend left him in a bar. His best friend left him in a bar after asking him to wait for him there and after asking the bar attendants to serve the author with alcohol as he would come and pay during his return while he was secretly going to the author's partner to have sex with her and get money from her to go and pay for the beers the author has taken in the bar. The author caught the two after three weeks while they were doing that all along. On the fateful day he caught them, his friend left as usual. The author only drank two beers, paid for them, bought himself six beers, told the bar attendants that when his best friend comes, they must tell him that he had gone to his place as he wanted to drink while home. His friend expected the author to call him on his mobile phone when he wanted to leave the bar but the author didn't call him. His partner expected the author to call her on her mobile phone too when coming home as the author used not to carry the house keys as he was somebody who used to lose them a lot. But this time around, the author had the kitchen door key without her knowledge. When the author got home, he tried to open the sitting room door and found it locked without the key in the hole. He then proceeded to the kitchen door and opened it. The author packed his beers in the fridge and something told him to go to the bedroom to inspect what was going on in it. Surprisingly when he entered, he found his best friend and partner in the position which is reflected on the outer cover of this book. After this incident he got curious to know why other people are killing their partners as even the highly trusted individuals one could think are there to watch their backs are also betraying them. That is when he went to prison to interview people who have killed their partners and got caught. He also interviewed people who were betrayed and became mentally disturbed after the relationships they were in and truly believed were unshakable were challenged. Also interviewed were some social workers, police officers, lawyers, judges, psychologists, pastors, African traditional doctors and the general public. After compiling all the information, he then wrote the book 'The Pain of Love.'
