Summary of Carla A. Harris's Strategize to Win Everest Media, 2022-05-21T22:59:00Z Please note: This is a companion version & not the original book. Sample Book Insights: #1 After graduating from college or military training, you have no idea what you want to do with your life. You're excited to start your career, but you have no idea where to start. We're going to help you figure out the first step in your career journey. #2 The modern approach to career planning is to consider your career in six to eight modules of five years each. These modules could potentially be at five or six different companies. For example, you may choose to do two five-year modules with Company A in one type of role, leave to complete your third module at Company B, and then return to Company A in a more senior role. #3 There is no need to rush into choosing a career. It is common to begin your career search after college, and even more common to want to make a change in your career several years down the road. #4 The first step in figuring out what you want to do with your life is to identify the content of your career. This involves thinking about what you like to do in life, and writing down those things on a sheet of paper. Then, figure out what skills you need to have to be eligible for those positions.

Summary of Carla A. Harris's Expect to Win Everest Media,2022-05-21T22:59:00Z Please note: This is a companion version & not the original book. Sample Book Insights: #1 The person you are at work is your competitive advantage. You can be free to learn new concepts, be creative, and take risks, which helps you become more valuable to the company. When you are not being who you really are, you will begin to appear uncomfortable to others. #2 A lack of confidence can also hurt you internally. When you are confident in who you are, it helps you build trust in relationships with the people you work with. If you are constantly questioning your abilities in the workplace, your colleagues will notice and try to make you doubt yourself. #3 To be yourself in a work environment, you must first understand what your competitive strengths are and concentrate on improving your weaknesses. You must always be prepared to explain why you deserve a promotion or a raise, or simply why you are so good at what you do. #4 Those who are comfortable in their own skin and who are bringing their real selves to work are the same people who can have an honest dialogue with their bosses, ask for the promotion, or the new assignment, and who are quick to point out when something is impeding their success.

Generosity and Gender Lois A. Buntz, 2022-01-19 The social, political, and economic environment is ripe with opportunity to engage women and their philanthropy. Professionals working in the field of philanthropy want ideas, practical information, research, and guidance about how to work with women donors, how to build women's philanthropy initiatives, and how to integrate this subset of donors into their current fund development departments. This book offers insight into the three historical waves of women's philanthropy and provides a summary of current research and inspiring stories collected from interviews with more than 70 women philanthropists and leaders. Each chapter begins with current research, followed by interviews and examples, and ends with suggestions for fundraisers on how to implement the information into a women's philanthropy initiative using a six-step process: Awareness, Assessment, Alignment, Action, Acknowledgement and Achievement. The last several chapters focus on lessons learned from successful programs in traditional organizational settings—healthcare, higher education, and environment—and what we have yet to learn from the new and emerging philanthropic models led by Laurene Powell Jobs, Priscilla Chan, Melinda Gates, Nancy Roob, and MacKenzie Scott. Throughout the book, themes of equity, diversity, and inclusion are evident and featured in stories and programs led by women of color and younger donors. Additionally, COVID has impacted how fundraisers work, requiring the philanthropy community to adapt and create new ways to reach women donors. The final chapter is a call to action to all women, to give bigger and bolder as the fourth wave of women's philanthropy rises.

Faithworks Carla Harris, 2018-06-21 Carla Harris, in FaithWorks: An Innovative Approach to Workforce Development, boldly contributes to the national conversation about changing human services for the betterment of citizens in transition as part of the evolving shift from welfare to Workforce Development. As 'comfortable in the Hood as I am in the White House,' Carla Harris demands that citizens 'living on the margins, living on the sidelines' be treated with dignity and be seen as 'Candidates' for opportunities, not as clients, not as numbers, not as a forgotten population by overworked, uninspired bureaucrats. In FaithWorks, Harris traces her own journey from the margins, and outlines an inspiring approach to 'humanizing human services' that views our fellow citizens as valuable men and women with potential, as neighbors who deserve respectful assistance on their journeys to jobs, careers, and all the happiness they envision for their families.
