Implementing National Qualifications Frameworks Across Five Continents Michael Young, Stephanie Allais, 2016-04-08
This book assesses the impact and implementation of national qualifications frameworks in sixteen different countries. It presents two major lessons for policy makers thinking of introducing a National Qualifications Framework (NQF). First, that an NQF is only a way of framing existing provision; it cannot on its own, lead to the acquisition of skills or knowledge. Second, as an attempt to standardize learning- something that is only to a limited extent standardizable, NQFs have disadvantages as well as advantages. The research was funded by the International Labour Organization (ILO) and the European Training Foundation (ETF) and, partly as a result of the ILO/ETF Report, the Editors were asked by the World Bank to help them in advising the government of India on introducing a NQF for vocational qualifications. Building on the findings of the report, the editors of this book presented an NQF implementation strategy to the Government of India on behalf of the World Bank. It laid out the steps and stages that would be involved and took account of the earlier experiences of introducing an NQF. Although this strategy was prepared specifically for the Government of India, others who have read it felt it deserved wider circulation. The report has therefore been included in this volume. Since this research was undertaken, the number countries, especially developing countries, implementing or introducing a NQF has continued to increase. This book will be of interest to policy makers and researchers. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Education and Work.

Language Assessment and the National Qualifications Framework Melissa Vieyra-King, Karen Calteaux, 1996 The collection of discussion papers from an October 1995 conference in South Africa focuses on the implications of the country's new National Qualifications Framework (NQF), a policy initiative for reform and renewal of post-apartheid education, for language teaching and testing. Papers include: Introductory Comments: Language Assessment and the NQF (Edward French, Ihron Rensburg); The NQF: Challenges in the Language Field (Schalk Engelbrecht, Gerard Schuring); Language Education and the National Qualifications Framework: An Introduction to Competency-Based Education and Training (Daryl McLean); Standards and Levels in Language Assessment (Paul Musker, Sebolelo Nomvete); The Assessment of Language Outcomes in ABET: Implications of an Approach (Elizabeth Burroughs, Melissa Vieyra-King, Gabi Witthaus); Issues Raised in Plenary: Summary (conference participants); Summing Up: Drawing the Issues Together: In the Context of Language Education Policy (Neville Alexander); Summing Up: Drawing the Issues Together: In the Context of the NQF (Jeanne Gamble); and Concluding Comments (Khetsi Lehoko). A list of participants is appended. (MSE)

The National Qualifications Framework ,1994*

Developing the National Qualifications ,1991 The New Zealand Qualifications Authority was established to develop a consistent approach to the recognition of academic and vocational qualifications. The National Qualifications Framework was designed following surveys of a number of sectors: universities, colleges of education, polytechnics, private training firms, schools, businesses, unions, government agencies, and community representatives. During the period of the consultation, officers of the Authority also attended some 350 briefings, seminars, and discussions with interested groups. The decisions made by the Board of the Qualifications Authority are based, therefore, on the results of 12 months of research and consultation. The framework is to be composed of four primary elements: (1) units of learning, among which learners could choose to build towards a qualification; (2) assessment and reporting, which relates the performance of the learner either to that of others in a similar group (norm-referenced assessment), or against predetermined standards (standards-based assessment); (3) recognition of prior learning, which endorses the principle of awarding credit for prior learning against units of learning in the national framework and which would include the establishment of credit transfer arrangements; and (4) quality systems, in which devolved quality management places responsibility on providers and their communities for assurance of quality. The qualifications will be organized on eight levels; levels 1-4 leading to a national certificate, levels 5-7 to a national diploma (level 7 also leading to an initial degree), and level 8 leading to other degrees or higher certificates/diplomas. A survey of the Maori community led to the development of Maori-based qualifications within the national framework. Other considerations included the following: certification of on-the-job training; a national information system for access to units and standards; a networked national database of student records; and a database of framework users. Each component of the framework described in this report is followed by a section discussing and explaining the decisions of the board concerning that component, and the report concludes with a simple list of the 23 decisions made. (Appendices contain a list of those to whom the questionnaires were sent to develop the framework and analysis of the questionnaire responses.) (CML)
