Parenting: a Child's Perspective Jaslin U. Salmon, 2007-10-24 Parenting: A Child's Perspective is neither biographical nor auto-biographical, but includes selected snap-shots from the lives of hundreds of parents and children. The author of the book spent many years observing and listening to parents and children in a wide variety of situations, and has done an excellent job of recounting these experiences without being judgmental. These experiences are not just presented, the author sought to interpret these experiences from the child's point of view, and in a most empathetic way, advises parents on how they could respond in similar situations. As one reads, one gets the feeling that one is in a counseling session with an astute professional. The interesting thing, however, is that the book is not burdened by the professional jargon that can be inhibiting to most readers. The particular technique used by the author is quite difficult. He sought to write the book from a child's perspective and to do so without gender bias. The reader will be impressed by the fact that the author has succeeded on both counts. As you read the book you get the feeling that the author was in your home eavesdropping on your family, because the situations are so real. If you are curious about how your child might view you, the book gives insights; wanting to know how to deal with difficult issues such as sex and sibling conflicts? This book gives you an unbiased and child-centered approach. Each chapter of the book takes a major issue during the first five years of the child's life, and dissects it in a way that provides new insights to parents at every stage of the parenting process.

Stocker Hill Dale R. Lentz, 2024-10-08 Stocker Hill is the largest hill in the valley. Its rugged peaks, voluptuous trees and brush also make it the most beautiful. As other hills in the valley lose their identity when the summer comes to an end, Stocker Hill holds onto its personality far into winter. It stands powerful and sturdy as the town of Walcott lays at its feet. Like all small towns, everyone knew everyone else's business – at least they thought so. John, Brad, Rob, and Reed share a burning curiosity about the grave on Stocker Hill. The four boys were up to some trouble. A visit to Harold's garage would change their lives forever, like their fathers before them. They feared what was ahead of them but there was no turning back now. About the Author Dale R. Lentz is a father of three; two boys and a girl along with being the youngest of five. The hobby of writing took its toll with the end result of this book and hopefully many more to follow. Along with writing, Dale gets lost in wood working projects by creating something interesting out of unique pieces of wood.
