The Use of the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis as a Predictive Instrument of Compliance in Treatment of Drunk Driving Clients Rory Fleming Richardson, 1995 This study examined the relationship of the Taylor-Johnson Temperament

Analysis (T-JTA) scores and demographic information of compliance and non-compliance with treatment of individuals who were court referred as a result of driving under the influence of intoxicants (DUII). the study consisted of 239 (118 compliant males; 82 non-compliant males; 22 compliant females; 7 non-compliant females) subjects referred to Tillamook Counseling, Inc. over a six year period for drunk driving offenses. the first hypothesis held there is no significant difference between the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis profiles of Compliant DUII clients and the Taylor-Johnson Temperament Analysis profiles of Non-compliant DUII clients which would make the T-JTA test a possible prognostic tool to determine risk of non-compliance during treatment. the second hypothesis held that both groups are from the same population, and there is no significant difference between attributes (i.e., age, race, marital status, family history, alcohol & drug use history, BAC level at time of arrest, social contacts, occupation, education, frequency of use, age first started, prior attempts to stop drinking, medical complications, psychosocial stressors, financial status, past legal history, family history of alcohol/drug use, level of denial) of Compliant DUII clients and those of Non-compliant DUII clients which may be factors in risk of non-compliance versus compliance during treatment. Solution-Focused Pastoral Counseling Charles Allen Kollar, 2011-05-03 An original, effective, and time-saving approach that benefits pastors overtaxed by counseling demands—fully updated and expanded. Professional counselor and pastor Dr. Charles Allen Kollar found that counseling does not need not be long-term or depend on psychological manipulation to produce dramatic results. In most cases, the solution lies with the counselees themselves. Using the tested methods found in Solution-Focused Pastoral Counseling, pastors, apart from counselors, will be well equipped to: help their counselees discover a solution and put it in motion speedily and productively. Institute healthy change by helping the counselee see and work on the solution with God's activity already present in his/her life. Create solutions with—not for—the counselee. Solution-Focused Pastoral Counseling does not require the counselor to be a highly trained psychological expert. It requires biblically based sensitivity and common sense. Yet this approach also recognizes its limitations and understands that there are situations in which other professional and/or medical help is required. This book reveals the possibility of life without the problem through an understanding of what is different when the problem does not occur or is less intrusive.
