Earth's Insights J. Baird Callicott, 1994-11-15 The environmental crisis is global in scope, yet contemporary environmental ethics is centered predominantly in Western philosophy and religion. Earth's Insights widens the scope of environmental ethics to include the ecological teachings embedded in non-Western worldviews. J. Baird Callicott ranges broadly, exploring the sacred texts of Islam, Hinduism, Jainism, Taoism, Confucianism, and Zen Buddhism, as well as the oral traditions of Polynesia, North and South America, and Australia. He also documents the attempts of various peoples to put their environmental ethics into practice. Finally, he wrestles with a question of vital importance to all people sharing the fate of this small planet: How can the world's many and diverse environmental philosophies be brought together in a complementary and consistent whole?

The Religious Thought in Islam Sir Muhammad Iqbal, 2000 The Quran emphasizes deed rather than idea. There are men who assimilate on alien universe by reliving a vital process, of inner experience on which religious faith rests. The modern man has developed habits of concrete thoughts which Islam itself fostered in the earlier stages of its cultural career. The more genuine schools of sufism have done good work in shaping and directing the evolution of religious experiences in Islam but the later day representatives, owing to the ignorance of the modern mind, have become incapable of receiving fresh inspiration from modern thought and experience. In these lectures the author has tried to meet the urgent need to reconstruct Muslim religious philosophy with regards to philosophical traditions of Islam and recent developments in the domains of human knowledge.

Living Earth Bernard Anton, 2022-12-07 What are the conceptions of the past civilizations and traditions from five continents on our relationships with nature? Do they cast a spiritual glance on those relationships? Could their ancestral wisdom have seen a sacred work in the universe? Why do they rather call it creation? This research will help the reader discover a real interreligious consensus: the main religions around the globe are unanimously aware and agree on principles such as the conservation of nature and the quality of the environment. A quite clear “green” message, revealed in the greatest beliefs, serves as a basis for a universal eco-ethic to adopt.
