Transgenerational Colonialism Karel James Bouse,2021-04-14 In Transgenerational Colonialism, Karel James Bouse offers an alternative and holistic model for the analysis of colonialism and its effects on humanity. Using the current anti-colonialist struggle in Northern Ireland as a representative case study, Bouse illustrates her theoretical model by tracing the onset of trauma to the eventual overcoming period, evidenced by a cultural renaissance, a reconstruction of collective positive identity, and political self-determination. This book is recommended for students and scholars of psychology, history, political science, and cultural studies, as well as those interested in the cyclical nature of colonial experience.

The Ethics and Aesthetics of Vulnerability in Contemporary British Fiction Jean-Michel Ganteau,2015-05-08 This book visits vulnerability in contemporary British fiction, considering vulnerability in its relation to poetics, politics, ethics, and trauma. Vulnerability and risk have become central issues in contemporary culture, and artistic productions have increasingly made it their responsibility to evoke various types of vulnerabilities, from individual fragilities to economic and political forms of precariousness and dispossession. Informed by trauma studies and the ethics of literature, this book addresses such issues by focusing on the literary evocations of vulnerability and analyzing various aspects of vulnerable form as represented and performed in British narratives, from contemporary classics by Peter Ackroyd, Pat Barker, Anne Enright, Ian McEwan, and Jeanette Winterson, to less canonical texts by Nina Allan, Jon McGregor, and N. Royle. Chapters on romance, elegy, the ghost story, and the state-of-the-nation novel draw on a variety of theoretical approaches from the fields of trauma studies, affect theory, the ethics of alterity, the ethics of care, and the ethics of vulnerability, among others. Showcasing how the contemporary novel is the privileged site of the expression and performance of vulnerability and vulnerable form, the volume broaches a poetics of vulnerability based on categories such as testimony, loss, unknowing, temporal disarray, and performance. On top of providing a book-length evocation of contemporary fictions of vulnerability and vulnerable form, this volume contributes significantly to considerations of the importance of Trauma Studies to Contemporary Literature.

Original Trauma Ramon K. Jusino, 2023-04-20 Some 3,000 years before the advent of modern psychology, which would identify childhood trauma as one of the primary causes of mental illness, the first authors of the Bible began to write a saga in which they collectively told the story of familial trauma, and how that trauma is passed down from parent to child over many generations. Today, this is referred to as inherited generational trauma. But, without the benefit of any knowledge of DNA or modern psychology, the biblical authors were able to observe how certain negative traits were passed down from parent to child across many generations. Of course, they didn't identify this phenomenon as being of psychological origin. They viewed this as the sins of the fathers which were passed down upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. The first impressions of God in the Bible came primarily from two men-Abraham and Moses. This is the Abrahamic/Mosaic God described throughout the first five books of Moses-best known as the Torah. The Abrahamic/Mosaic God instilled fear in people by flooding the whole world, inflicting plagues, and otherwise expressing his anger. In fact, the Bible tells us that Moses reluctantly did what God wanted him to do because Moses was afraid of making God angry. And at one point, the Abrahamic/Mosaic God sought to kill Moses. For better or worse, the Abrahamic/Mosaic God would set the template for how God would be perceived by many for thousands of years. Ultimately, Jesus offers the way to break the cycle of generational trauma. The observations in this book apply to everyone, whether religious or not. None of us is immune to the effects of inherited generational trauma, or the fallout from whatever impressions we may have learned about God when we were children. The author offers this book in the hopes that it may be helpful to his readers, and that they would consider it to be an informative and entertaining good read.

Generational Traumas in Contemporary Cuban-American Literature Rafael Miguel Montes, 2006 Through a critical examination of a number of artistic, musical, and literary productions created by the children of Cuban exiles, this book defines frameworks with which to discuss second-generation Cuban-American texts. Culturally Competent Practice Rowena Fong, Sharlene Maeda Furuto, 2001 This comprehensive social work book discusses how to work with clients of four major ethnic backgrounds: African-American, Latino/Hispanic-American, First Nations People, and Asians/Pacific Islanders. The book shows readers how to approach helping by first understanding the world view of each of these groups. Each chapter includes indigenous strategies and/or a biculturalization approach to assessments, interventions, and evaluations. Levels of practice include individuals, families, organizations, and communities. Each chapter includes case vignettes that illustrate the helping strategies. Love After Auschwitz - the Second Generation in Germany Kurt Grünberg, 2006 This book addresses the personal and collective abysses that may open when, albeit many years after the Holocaust, but in the very country of the murderers, one examines the legacy of the National Socialist extermination of Jews. Jewish Lebenswelt in Germany entails involvement of survivors and their sons and daughters, born after the Shoah, with the non-Jewish German world of Nazi perpetrators, supporters, bystanders and their children. Love relationships probably represent the most intimate contact between former victims and perpetrators, or their supporters. This exploration of second-generation relationships in post-National-Socialist Germany is aimed at gaining deeper insights into what Theodor W. Adorno called the »culture after Auschwitz«. The true extent and significance of the chasm that did indeed emerge during the course of this endeavour only became apparent in retrospect. Therefore, an article about the »history« of working on »Love after Auschwitz« has been included.

Mothering and Inter/Generational Trauma Lamees Al Ethari, Maria Lombard, 2025-09-15 This volume examines experiences and meanings of motherhood impacted by displacement and intergenerational trauma. The collection builds upon Marianne Hirsch's concept of postmemory, which states that the ?generation after [will] grow up dominated by narratives that preceded their birth, whose own belated stories are evacuated by the stories of the previous generation shaped by traumatic events that can neither be understood nor recreated? (Hirsch 22). The volume contextualizes concepts of postmemory through the perspectives of the mother, the mother/child relationship, and the mother/society dynamic. Through research, personal narratives, and creative and artistic reflections, the chapters construct diverse interpretations of postmemory in relation to mothering.

The Burden of Heritage: Hauntings of Intergenerational Trauma on Black Lives Aileen Alleyne, 2022-08-30 This book is a crucial and timely addition to the ever-present subject of Inter- and Transgenerational Trauma. It charts the modes of transmission of black ancestral trauma passed down the generations and highlights the psychological impacts on black people's sense of identity and selfhood. It also explores the unheeded dimensions of both individual and collective identity trauma, and pays particular attention to black identity wounding, shame, and cultural enmeshment issues. In this book, the author represents the idea of the Internal Oppressor that inhibits self-belief and potential. Alleyne suggests that this formidable enemy within is the first port of call in breaking the cycle of generational trauma. It is an insightful and educational resource for understanding historical trauma transmissions, replete with tools and theoretical handles for managing present day problems that inhibit black people's individuation and actualising processes.
