Placing Children in Special Education National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Child Development Research and Public Policy, Panel on Selection and Placement of Students in Programs for the Mentally Retarded, 1982-02-01 The document contains the final report of a project to determine the factors that account for disproportionate representation of minority students in special education programs, especially programs for mentally retarded students; and to identify placement criteria for practices that do not affect minority students disproportionately. Chapter 1 looks at six potential causes of disproportionate placement of minorities in educable mentally retarded (EMR) programs: legal and administrative requirements, characteristics of students, quality of the instruction received, possible biases in the assessment process, characteristics of the home and family environment, and broader historical and cultural contexts. Chapter 2 describes characteristics of EMR students, then reviews the historical origins of special education in America with attention to the role of the standardized intelligence test for identification and placement of mentally retarded students. A third chapter is split into two sections--one on the issues surrounding the instruments that comprise a comprehensive battery for assessing a child who is unable to learn normally in the classroom, and the other on an ideal assessment process in which the comprehensive assessment would be embedded. Chapter 4 considers the components of effective education programs for EMR students and reviews three approaches to instruction (the separate class structure, the resource room, and the teacher consultant model). A final chapter lists recommendations for improvements in special education referral, assessment, and placement procedures and instructional practices. More than half the document is comprised of six background papers with the following titles and authors: Biological and Social Factors Contributing to Mild Mental Retardation (J. Shonkoff); Classifying Mentally Retarded Students--A Review of Placement Practices in Special Education (W. Bickel); Testing in Educational Placement--Issues and Evidence (J. Travers); Effects of Special Education Placement on Educable Mentally Retarded Children (K. Heller); Some

Potential Incentives of Special Education Funding Practices (S. Magnetti); and Patterns in Special Education Placement as Revealed by the OCR Survey (J. Finn). (SB)

Ultimate IQ Tests Philip Carter, Ken Russell, 2012 IQ tests are increasingly encountered in recruitment for various industries, including the government, armed forces, education and industry and commerce. Competition is fierce and employers are determined to cut the weak from the strong. Ultimate IQ Tests is the biggest book of IQ practice tests available. Written and compiled by IQ-test experts it contains 1000 practice questions organized into 25 tests, with a simple guide to assessing individual performance. Working through the questions will help you to improve your vocabulary and develop powers of calculation and logical reasoning. Ultimate IQ Tests is an invaluable resource if you have to take an IQ test, but it's also great fun if you like to stretch your mind for your own entertainment - and boost your brain power.

Developing a Simple and Rapid Test for Monitoring the Heat Evolution of Concrete Mixtures for Both Laboratory and Field Applications, 2008 The objective of this research project is to identify, develop, and evaluate a simple, economical, and reliable calorimetry device and test method for monitoring heat evolution of pavement concrete. The project contains three phases: phase I - identifying user needs for calorimeter tests, phase II - identifying potential calorimeter devices and developing test procedures, and phase III - verifying the test procedures and the potential applications of calorimetry in field. In this report, the work done in phases I and II is briefly summarized and the study of phase III is presented. The phase III study includes three parts: (1) field calorimetry tests, (2) lab tests for the field materials, and (3) implementation of calorimetry into pavement performance prediction. The field tests were conducted at three selected sites: US 71 (Atlantic, Iowa), Highway 95 (Alma Center, Wisconsin), and US 63 bypass (Ottumwa, Iowa). A simple isothermal calorimetry and two semi-adiabatic calorimetry (AdiaCal and IQ drum) tests were conducted at these sites. The general concrete, such as slump, air content, unit weight, placement temperature, ASTM C403 set time, and pavement properties, such as subbase temperature and sawing time were also measured. In the lab tests of the field materials, nine robust mixes for each field site, with different variations in water reducer and/or fly ash dosages were developed. AdiaCal and isothermal calorimeter tests were performed for each of the robust mixes. IQ drum and ASTM C403 set time tests were conducted for selected mixes. To implement the calorimetry test results into concrete performance prediction, the HIgh PERformance PAVing (HIPERPAV) computer program was modified, the calculated hydration curve parameters from selected calorimetry tests were used as inputs for the modified HIPERPAV program, and the temperature developments of in-situ pavements were then predicted. The phase III test results confirmed the major findings drawn in the phase II study. The results indicate that both the AdiaCal and semi-adiabactic calorimetry tests can provide valuable information on concrete performance. AdiaCal calorimetry is particularly good for field concrete set time prediction, and it is sensitive to the sample temperature. Isothermal calorimetry can provide users more detailed information on cement hydration and provide more consistent test results. The thermal set times obtained from both the AdiaCal and isothermal calorimetry tests are closely related to those measured from the ASTM C403 tests. Using the calorimetry test curve as inputs for the HIPERPAV computer program, in-situ concrete pavement temperatures can be predicted adequately.

IQ and Psychometric Tests Philip J. Carter, 2004 Over 400 brand new questions Despite the enormous capacity of the human brain, we only use a fraction of our potential brainpower. And while most of us believe there is little we can do to improve the brain we were born with, it has been proven that thought processes can be improved and sharpened by attempting various types of test. This new title from IQ expert Philip Carter consists of tests and exercises designed to stretch and exercise, as well as entertain, the mind. The concept of IQ is broadening to include different types of intelligence, such as creativity and emotional intelligence; this book reflects that shift. As well as IQ tests it contains tests in the areas of : Verbal intelligence Spatial appreciation Numerical calculation Logical reasoning Memory Creativity Lateral thinking Mental agility Personality Through practice it is possible to improve your IQ rating or performance at psychometric tests, and this book provides an ideal opportunity for doing just that.
