The Quest for the Sustainable Development Goals Thiago Gehre Galvao, Henrique Zeferino de Menezes, 2024-08-22 The book presents the experiences, complexities, and contradictions of the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals in Brazil so far. Through chapters from a variety of stakeholders, the book examines national, regional, and local aspects of development in Brazil. The chapters here draw from scientific knowledge and practical experience to take a critical look at what the SDGs mean in a Global South country and what the implications of this are for global development. The book is divided into three sections. The first section addresses the critical political and institutional aspects related to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals in Brazil, highlighting advances as well as pitfalls and setbacks. The chapters look at broad questions related to the role of civil society in defining political priorities and strategies to move forward with the SDGs as well as issues involved in incorporating the SDGs at different levels of government and other institutions. The chapters in this section critically address the political and institutional advances as well as barriers to the progress of the SDGs in Brazil. The second section directly addresses progress made toward the SDGs in the context of the political, economic and social variables specific to Brazil. The chapters address critical shortcomings and demands for Brazilian society: the need for improvements in education and employment policies to reduce poverty, the urgent need to increase gender equality and reduce violence, as well as the imperative to strengthen institutions and policies to mitigate climate change and protect the environment. The final section focuses on critically assessing the 2030 Agenda itself and drawing from a Global South IR perspective. The chapters here dialog with decolonial and post-developmental perspectives to highlight problems with the agenda and lift up sidelined priorities, presenting yet-unexamined policy solutions and innovations that are currently absent from the global institutional agenda. The Brazilian case is a perfect illustration of how underdevelopment and political instability can constrain the paths to sustainable development, while at the same time social innovations, leverages based on regional dynamics, and strength from social and cultural diversity can drive sustained progress.

Agroforestry for biodiversity and ecosystem services Donald Mlambo, Yashmita Ulman, Pedro Álvarez-Álvarez, Sangram Bhanudas Chavan, 2025-06-18 Agroforestry (farming systems with trees) has been practised for millennia across the world, but its significance as a relevant part of land use has not been formally recognized. As global food demand continues to increase, farmers are increasingly relying on intensive use of existing croplands and land clearing, resulting in environmental degradation. This degradation includes the loss of biodiversity and vital ecosystem services that support human well-being. However, recent discourses suggest that unlocking the potential of agroforestry could offer a solution to this pressing challenge. By harnessing agroforestry, we have the opportunity to support biodiversity in agricultural landscapes, improve agricultural productivity and livelihoods, and provide numerous ecosystem services such as nutrient retention, erosion control, carbon sequestration, pollination, pest control and fire risk reduction. Agroforestry encompasses a wide spectrum of practices including natural vegetation remnants, Taungya, hedgerows, windbreaks, home gardens, forest farming, riparian buffers, fallow areas, silvopasture and alley cropping. By exploring these diverse agroforestry systems worldwide, we can better understand the comprehensive range of ecosystem services they offer. One of the greatest challenges faced by humanity in the Anthropocene is to reconcile biodiversity conservation with the demands of economic development, which often involves converting forestland to other land uses. Globally, forest conversion and unsustainable management practices in agricultural landscapes are driving the loss of biodiversity and ecosystem services. Recent research has advanced our understanding of the potential of agroforestry as a solution to environmental degradation, highlighting the need to unlock its potential to achieve both local and global sustainable development goals. However, scientific evidence on the impacts of agroforestry on biodiversity and ecosystem services is not yet universally available. To upscale agroforestry practices, it is crucial to gather field-based evidence that demonstrates the benefits of biodiversity conservation through agroforestry. This evidence will support informed decision-making by farmers, advisory services, and policy-making bodies. Therefore, this issue aims to present information and evidence from various regions of the world, shedding light on the diverse services provided by agroforestry and how these systems are being utilized in the current era of climate change and sustainable development.

Handbook on Lived Experience in the Justice System Christopher P. Dum, Jamie J. Fader, Thomas P. LeBel, Kevin A. Wright, 2025-12-11 This volume offers a diverse set of scholarly essays on the imaginative potential of corrections and sentencing research/practice that centers on the lived experience of the criminal legal system. The Editors define “lived experience” broadly, encompassing the subjective ways in which corrections and sentencing directly or indirectly affect a person’s daily life. They employ a diverse and expansive conceptualization of lived experience; for example, people with lived experience can be directly involved in writing or conducting the research or may be indirectly involved where the submission is about a program that includes people with lived experience in its operations (e.g., credible messengers). The volume includes 60 chapters written by academics, practitioners, and lived experts who are currently or formerly system-impacted. Chapters include short reflection essays on the meaning of lived experience, state of the knowledge reviews on topics related to lived experience, and more traditional empirical entries that highlight specific dimensions of lived experience. This groundbreaking and thought-provoking Handbook will appeal to academics, practitioners, policymakers, advocates, and students seeking to understand the many ways in which corrections and sentencing directly or indirectly affect a person’s daily life. This is Volume 10 of The ASC Division on Corrections and Sentencing Handbook Series. The handbooks provide in-depth coverage of topical issues around sentencing and corrections for scholars, students, practitioners, and policymakers.

Sustainable Food Procurement Mark Stein, Maurizio Mariani, Roberto Caranta, Yiannis Polychronakis, 2024-02-23 The book examines sustainable food procurement policy and practice in the European Union and beyond, exploring the extent to which sustainability objectives have been achieved and evaluating the new developments taking place at both EU and national levels. While there is a growing recognition that public authorities can use public procurement as a policy tool to pursue multiple environmental, health and socio-economic objectives, contracting authorities still face many challenges. This volume investigates the scope for pursuing sustainable objectives in public procurement of food and catering services, examining different regulatory contexts and organisational models to answer the overall question of how to integrate sustainability concerns into the various phases of public food procurement processes. Contributions in the book examine the policy and legal procurement framework and practices for sustainable public catering in three EU Member States: Italy, France and Spain. There is a comparative survey of the Baltic Region, including Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Poland and Russia, and moving beyond the EU, there is examination of the UK and Brazil, as well as a cross country comparison of the UK with Denmark and Sweden. Drawing on the expertise of an interdisciplinary and intersectoral team of contributors allows the book to benefit from the insights of different disciplines, including business sciences, anthropology and law. Tapping into the global discussion on public food procurement as a means to achieve multiple social and environmental goals, this work will stimulate readers looking for new creative ways to create value through public food purchasing. This book will be of great interest to students, researchers, policymakers and public- and private-sector representatives interested in public procurement, food policy and law, sustainable food sourcing and supply chain management.

Environmental, Social and Governance and Sustainable Development in Healthcare Tiffany Cheng Han Leung, Wang-Kin Chiu, Cindy Shi-Xiang You, Ben Yuk Fai Fong, 2023-05-15 This book applies environmental, social and governance (ESG) to issues of sustainable development in healthcare. ESG reporting has been widely used for some time in the business industry to show the economic, social and environmental responsibilities of companies that aim to achieve superior ESG performance for lower risk, more accountability and transparency. Moreover, public-listed companies in healthcare have been growing in significant numbers in recent years. The application or practice of ESG in healthcare has become a growing trend for these large organisations looking to demonstrate their strengths in areas of financing, operations, sustainability and social responsibilities. Such an approach is essential not only for the long-term development of the companies but also for services delivered by healthcare practitioners. Equally, the implications to Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 3 is relevant to healthcare worldwide with a growing ageing population, which has led to a great burden of care in many countries, particularly in the public sector. The potential development and expansion in private healthcare services, accelerated by technology advancement, has demanded a new paradigm in the healthcare industry, particularly in business, service delivery and policy. The book examines this paradigm through health in all policies, ESG and SDG 3 objectives, research, training and practice. It is relevant to graduate students and scholars working in areas relating to health, business and the SDGs and is also useful to policymakers and practitioners in healthcare.

Preventing zoonoses. Promoting biophilia Jamie K. Reaser, Thomas H. Beery, Sean Southey, Hongying Li, 2025-06-25 Wild animals seem to be involved in the epidemiology of most zoonoses (infectious diseases transmitted between people and other animals), and serve as major reservoirs for the transmission of zoonotic agents to domestic animals and humans. It's likely that the human animal has always been susceptible to infectious diseases originating in wildlife and these diseases play a driving role in the evolution of Homo sapiens. Presently, the large spatio-temporal scale of environmental degradation coupled with the globalization of trade and travel create conditions that make zoonoses a major public health problem, globally. Efforts to increase public awareness of the potential for wildlife to transmit zoonotic pathogens with high morbidity and mortality risk may instill or amplify fear of wildlife and the natural environment in general (biophobia). For example, due to increased reporting of rare but potentially problematic zoonotic diseases associated with bats, bat biophobia has become major threat to bat conservation. Fear drives people to kill bats and destroy their roost sites. There is a need to facilitate public awareness of zoonoses-related issues while simultaneously promoting biophilia. This Research Topic will explore how zoonoses prevention efforts can consciously and actively promote biophilia (wildlife affinity and conservation) rather than biophobia. Facilitating public biophilia is in-and-of-itself a zoonotic disease prevention measure; protecting and restoring natural ecosystems, which can only happen when they are highly valued, is the most fundamental ('upstream') approach to preventing zoonotic spillover. We anticipate that Traditional Ecological Knowledge, narrative storytelling, social marketing, and other approaches to human behavior changes based on holistic approaches to human values/needs alignment can offer insights and strategies for addressing this pressing, complex problem at the interface of conservation and public health. We are particularly interested in papers that empirically investigate how zoonotic pathogen risk can be mitigated in conjunction with activities that instill biophilia toward zoonotic pathogen hosts. Papers will also be considered that present/evaluate: 1) Accounts of biophobic responses to zoonotic pathogen risk resulting in harm to wildlife host species. Include a section on lessons learned applicable to instilling host biophilia. 2) Case studies of specific initiatives promoting biophilia in the zoonotic risk mitigation context. Analyze project effectiveness from ecological and social perspectives. 3) Models for facilitating biophilia in the zoonotic risk mitigation context. Include guidance for testing/applying these models. 4) Methods for developing effective social marketing campaigns and other approaches for instilling biophilia in the zoonoses risk mitigation context. Review the science that underpins the method(s) and distinguish between field-tested and proposed methods. All papers should emphasize conservation goals/outcomes. This Research Topic was developed in collaboration with the IUCN Commission on Education and Communication

(<https://www.iucn.org/our-union/commissions/commission-education-and-communication>) and the International Alliance Against Health Risks in the Wildlife Trade (<https://alliance-health-wildlife.org>). Direct inquiries about other manuscripts themes/types to Dr. Jamie K. Reaser at Reaserjk@si.edu
