The Oxford Dictionary of Humorous Quotations Ned Sherrin, 2001 In The Oxford Dictionary of Humorous Quotations, noted writer and satirist Ned Sherrin has gathered nearly 6,000 quotations drawn from an international cast of humorists and pundits, ranging from Shakespeare, Jane Austen, and Oscar Wilde to Groucho Marx, Monty Python, and Roseanne. Forty themes, from computers to tennis, and over eight hundred quotations, are completely new to this edition. Arranged in themes from Actors and Acting (including Dorothy Parker's famous barb on Katherine Hepburn's Broadway debut, She ran the whole gamut of the emotions from A to B) to Youth (Georges Courteline, It's better to waste one's youth than to do nothing with it at all), Sherrin has collected the sharpest, the wittiest, the wryest in quips, put-downs, and one-liners. Here are the best lines of comedians and playwrights, novelists and producers, cartoonists and moguls, soldiers and lawyers. Readers will find Woody Allen (I don't want to achieve immortality through my work...I want to achieve it by not dying), Noel Coward, Cole Porter, Mae West, Will Rogers, and George Bernard Shaw--as well as literary wags from Kingsley Amis to Evelyn Waugh and Gore Vidal (on Eisenhower in 1964, reading a speech with his usual sense of discovery). Each quotation comes with details of who said it, where, and when, while separate keyword and author indices mean the reader will never have to wonder whose line is it anyway? Displaying all shades of humor, from dry to sly, subtle to wacky, The Oxford Dictionary of Humorous Quotations will be the perfect resource for public speakers, writers and anyone else who enjoys a sparkling line, a clever pun, or a wickedly clever riposte.

Good Christian Girls Elizabeth Bradshaw,2024-02-13 Lacey Heller is sure that nothing interesting could possibly happen at Camp Lavender, because it never does. Her parents have been running this Christian camp for girls ever since she can remember. Little does Lacey know that Jo Delgado is coming to camp this summer—and she’s going to change everything. After the incident, Jo’s aunt sends her to Camp Lavender instead of the science camp she desperately wants to attend. Her aunt hopes that Camp Lavender will put Jo on the “right path,” influenced by nice girls like Lacey. The best Jo can hope for is to run a successful experiment so that she doesn’t waste her whole summer. Lacey is a good Christian girl...or at least she thought she was. But Jo changes all that. There’s something different about Jo—and that something could get Lacey into big trouble. Lacey and Jo must help each other untangle who they are from who everyone says they’re supposed to be.

Managing Cultural Diversity in the Work Arena Kevin Steven Frank, 2001 With the year 2000 here, we are finding that companies in the United States are increasingly more ethnically and culturally diverse. In fact, young white males no longer make up the majority of the new working pool. 'Minority' people are rapidly becoming the majority of the workforce; however, they still face barriers and challenges to rising through the ranks of leadership and being provided the opportunities their white, male co-workers are presented with. Although these challenges and barriers may be more subtle in nature, they impede the career development of ethnically and culturally diverse workers. Not only are they being affected by this, organizations lose out on great opportunities. These organizations are not tapping into their natural talent pool, and are not capitalizing on their most important resource -- their human resources. Not only should the ethical and moral implications be considered, but the fact is organizations who nurture, develop, and empower their culturally diverse workforce are more successful in the world that is now a globally competitive market place. Mentoring programs may provide a mechanism to support and promote cultural diversity within the organization. Mentoring is a relationship whereby such things as advice, support, counseling, and developmental and training opportunities are provided to a protege by a mentor. Mentoring people of culturally diverse minority backgrounds, what this author calls 'cross-cultural' mentoring may be used as a tool to increase a diversity-friendly workplace, and environment in which all people may feel comfortable and effectively reach their potential. However, there is little research on mentor relationships between people of different ethnic, racial, and cultural backgrounds. The primary purpose of this research was to explore cross-cultural mentoring relationships in today's workplace, and the factors that make these relationships effective from the perspective of the ethnic minority protege. A qualitative approach was taken in this research. Twenty-five ethnic/cultural minority proteges were interviewed in depth. Several findings are presented in this study. Findings suggest that ethnic minority proteges place great value on the psychosocial functions provided in mentoring. To somewhat of a lesser degree, the subjects also place great importance on the career functions of mentoring. The research subjects also describe personality traits of a mentor that help facilitate a healthy, effective mentoring relationship. Both benefits and detriments to cross-cultural mentoring are presented, along with a discussion of additional variables that impact the cross-cultural mentoring relationship. Various factors that may influence the mentoring relationship, such as gender, socioeconomic status, specific ethnic/cultural background, and whether or not the relationship is same-cultural are explored--Leaves xiii-xv.
