Complications in Canine Cranial Cruciate Ligament Surgery Ron Ben-Amotz, David L. Dycus, 2021-07-29 Filling a gap in the current literature, Complications in Canine Cranial Cruciate Ligament Surgery provides revision strategies for correcting the complications associated with surgical repair techniques for cranial cruciate ligament rupture, one of the most common causes of a hind limb lameness in dogs. Presenting step-by-step instructions for numerous surgical correction techniques, this practical guide covers articular, extra-articular and osteotomy repair techniques as well as non-surgical management, physical rehabilitation, clinical decision making, and more. The book begins with an overview of cranial cruciate ligament tear, diagnosis, and treatment goals, followed by a discussion of methods for minimizing surgical site infection and complications. Subsequent chapters describe the potential complications of a particular technique and explain how to identify, evaluate, and correct the complication. Throughout the book, hundreds of high-quality clinical photographs show the appearance of complications and demonstrate each step of the corrective procedure. This authoritative guide: Provides step-by-step techniques for surgical corrections of common complications Emphasizes surgical decision making and specific strategies for surgical correction Contains revision strategies for identification of intra-operative complications Covers evaluation and identification of post-operative complications Features more than 400 photographs and clinical images Part of the state-of-the-art Advances in Veterinary Surgery series, Complications in Canine Cranial Cruciate Ligament Surgery is an invaluable resource for surgical residents, veterinary surgeons, and general practice veterinarians alike.

TPLO Surgery Workshop ,2007

A Comparison of the Effect of Three Different Low-level Laser Power Settings on Limb Function, Bone Healing and Pain in Dogs Following Tibial Plateau Levelling Osteotomy Chi-Ya Chen,2020 Objective: To evaluate the effect of different low-level laser therapy (LLLT) power settings on pain, limb use, bone healing, and the synovial prostaglandin E2 (PGE2) concentrations in dogs after tibial plateau levelling osteotomy (TPLO) surgery. Materials and Methods: A randomized, double-blinded, prospective study with 9 client-owned dogs with spontaneous unilateral cranial cruciate ligament rupture. Patients were divided into 3 LLLT power treatment groups; 2, 4 or 6 J/cm², respectively, using two 808nm, 500mW power Class IIIB laser sources. All dogs underwent stifle arthroscopy followed by TPLO surgery. Outcome metrics included serial orthopaedic examinations, accelerometry, goniometry, ground reaction force analysis (GRF), Canine Brief Pain Inventory (CBPI), Modified Glasgow Composite Pain Scale (MGPS), radiographic scoring, and synovial PGE2 concentrations over the 8-week study period. Results: There were no significant differences in outcome metrics between all treatment groups over the study period. Positive trends were noted with CBPI, MGPS, and GRF in 2 J/cm² and 6 J/cm² groups and increased bone healing and decreased synovial PGE2 concentrations in the 4 J/cm² group. Clinical Significance: Although statistical significance was not detected in this study, trends were observed between the 3 laser treatment groups. The statistical variables from this pilot study will aid in designing a larger controlled, LLLT power-variable study in future TPLO surgery patients.

Surgical Site Infections in Veterinary Medicine; A Focus on the Tibial Plateau Levelling Osteotomy and an In Vitro Evaluation of the Elution of Amikacin and Dispersin B From a Local Drug Delivery System Christopher Hagen,2019 Surgical site infection (SSI) after tibial plateau leveling osteotomy (TPLO) is a common, frustrating, and expensive complication. The underlying reason for this increased risk of infection is poorly understood but is further complicated by biofilm formation. Emerging resistance, adverse effects of antimicrobials, and altered environments within an infection have revealed a need for local delivery of drugs including antimicrobials and anti-biofilm agents. The objectives of this study were to evaluate potential risk factors associated with SSI after TPLO and determine the in vitro elution profile of amikacin and Dispersin B from a novel polymer hydrogel. Administering pre-operative antibiotics greater than 60 minutes from the first incision and administration of post-operative antibiotics were protective against SSI. Patients younger than 6 and older than 12 years were at higher risk of developing an SSI. Amikacin and Dispersin B both rapidly eluted from the polymer hydrogel in the first 24 hours and there was no clinically significant difference in their total elution over ten days when compounded individually or together. These data suggest further research is required to determine optimal peri-operative antimicrobial regimens including timing and length of administration. Additionally, the combination of amikacin and Dispersin B in a polymer hydrogel had promising results for local treatment of complex infections involving biofilms.

In Vitro Biomechanical Comparison of Double Versus Single Plated Tibial Plateau Leveling Osteotomy

Constructs in Axial Loading Rebecca L. Ball,2009 The mean construct stiffness for the TPLO-broad constructs was not significantly different from that of the TPLO-double constructs. The minimum effective number of implants should be used clinically to achieve stability when performing a TPLO. Implant stiffness is a key contributor to the stability of an osteotomy and is integral to osteotomy healing.

Ex Vivo Biomechanical Evaluation of a Novel Screw for Tibial Plateau Leveling Osteotomy William Seth Kettleman,2022

Twelve pairs of cadaveric pelvic limbs were harvested from skeletally mature dogs. Tibias were randomly assigned pairwise to two study groups: locking buttress screw fixation (LBS) and bone-screw-fastener fixation (BSF). A tibial plateau leveling osteotomy (TPLO) was performed. Each specimen was positioned in a servohydraulic testing machine to simulate physiological orientation and loading at the mid-point of the stance phase at the walk. Cyclic loading was performed for 30,000 cycles at 4Hz with a peak-load of 1000N. The cyclic test was then continued by stepwise increasing the peak-load at a rate of 75N per 500 cycles until failure of the construct. The findings of this current study suggest that stabilization of the TPLO with BSF in the proximal part of a locking TPLO plate provided similar biomechanical stability under cyclic axial loading conditions as the LBS. BSF may be an acceptable alternative to LBS for TPLO.
