Mike Jess

Neonatal Screening for Critical Congenital Heart Defects Andrew Ewer, 2019-06-14 Critical congenital heart defects (CCHDs) are potentially life-threatening malformations that remain a significant cause of neonatal mortality and morbidity. Failure to diagnose these conditions shortly after birth may result in acute cardiovascular collapse and death. The identification of CCHDs by routine newborn clinical examination is routine in many countries, but consistently misses over a third of cases, and, although antenatal ultrasound screening can be very effective in early diagnosis, the provision and accuracy of ultrasound screening is highly variable. As most CCHDs present with mild cyanosis (hypoxaemia), which is frequently clinically undetectable, pulse oximetry is a rapid, simple, painless method of accurately identifying hypoxaemia, which has gained popularity as a screen for CCHD. This Special Issue of the International Journal of Neonatal Screening, devoted to Neonatal Screening for Critical Congenital Heart Defects (CCHDs), will consider the evidence for CCHD screening with pulse oximetry, the acceptability and cost-effectiveness of this intervention, the additional non-cardiac conditions which it may also identify, and international experiences of introducing CCHD screening across the globe.

Early Detection and Intervention in Audiology Katijah Khoza-Shangase, Amisha Kanji, 2021-02-01 A textbook with case studies for audiologists and speech pathologists to make recommendations for early detection and intervention of hearing impairments in the South African context Early hearing detection and intervention (EHDI) is the gold standard for any practicing audiologist, and for families of infants and children with hearing impairment. EHDI programs aim to identify, diagnose and provide intervention to children with hearing impairment from as early as six months old (as well as those at risk for hearing impairment) to ensure they develop and achieve to their potential. Yet EHDI remains a significant challenge for Africa, and various initiatives are in place to address this gap in transferring policy into practice within the southern African context. The diversity of factors in the southern African context presents unique challenges to teaching and research in this field, which has prompted this book project. The South African government's heightened focus on increasing access to health care which includes ongoing Early Childhood Development (ECD) programs, make this an opportune time for establishing and documenting evidence-based research for current undergraduate and postgraduate students. Early Detection and Intervention in Audiology: An African Perspective aims to address this opportunity. Grounded in an African context with detailed case studies, this book provides rich content that pays careful attention to contextual relevance and contextual responsiveness to both identification and intervention in hearing impairment. With diverse contributions from experts in local and international contexts, but always with an African perspective, this textbook will be an invaluable resource for students, researchers and practitioners.

Genetic Screening Bartha Maria Knoppers, Claude M. Laberge, Quebec Network of Genetic Medicine, New England Regional Screening Program, Association française de prévention des handicaps, 1990 Dramatic advances in recombinant DNA technology are about to bring fundamental changes in genetic screening. As clinically oriented researchers pursue dozens of disease genes, basic scientists dazzle us with new technologies, one of the most important being the polymerase chain reaction. The questions accompanying screening scenarios seem to amplify at a rate approaching that of the polymerase chain reaction. Genetic Screening: From Newborns to DNA Typing arrives at a crucial moment to help us confront these and many other questions. It is the work product of two dozen leading authorities in the field of newborn screening who gathered to focus their thoughts intensively on the present state of screening and to formulate principles to guide the practice of neonatal screening in the next decade. The book is logically organized and presents much valuable material, examines the more recent experiences in screening for congenital diseases, ascertaining HIV seroprevalence, and raises important ethical and legal questions. The volume is an admirable conception and will undoubtedly be of interest to all involved with genetic testing.
